Prefatory Note.

The first question asked by many on opening this book will perhaps be, 'Why was it written in English, its author being a German?' The plain answer is, 'At the suggestion of the learned Editor of this Collection, who, like the author, thinks that in this shape the book will find more friends among the English-speaking nations, for whom it is as much intended as for German students'. For although we are not ignorant that the knowledge of our tongue has been lately gaining ground in Great Britain as well as in the United States, it is also a fact that many who would like to acquaint themselves with the method of editing ancient texts used in this country, are deterred from studying a work written in a language in which they do not feel at home. On the other hand, our German readers will find no great trouble in understanding this book in its foreign garment, as any one who wishes to occupy himself with Chaucer thoroughly must at least have mastered the elements of Modern English; and it may perhaps be welcome to some of our University teachers who are desirous of inducing their hearers to practise the English language as much as possible in their lectures (Seminarier).

Introduction.

Chapter I.

The Former Editions of the Pardoner's Prologue and Tale.¹⁾

A separate issue of the 'Pardoner' has never been made before, but it was edited, together with the Tale of the Man of Lawe, the Second Nonnes Tale, and the Chanouns Yemannes Tale, by Prof. W. W. Skeat in 1877 for the Clarendon Press, which edition has been several times revised and reprinted.

In all other cases, the 'Pardoner' has been published only in complete editions of the 'Canterbury Tales', the first of which was printed by William Caxton, about 1477—78, and, in a corrected shape, again about 1483. These texts have been reproduced by the Chaucer Society (Specimens, Part. V, p. XIV sqq.), and have been duly taken notice of in the present publication (s. ch. VI.).

The next editions, those by Pynson (ab. 1493 and again 1526¹⁾) and by Wynkyn de Worde (1498), are of no philological interest, being only reprints of the former.

Then followed the edition of Wm. Thynne in 1532, twice reprinted (1542 & ab. 1550) with some additional pieces, whose text has also been reproduced in the above-named publication of the Ch. S., the value of which will be discussed below on p. LIII.

In 1561 another reprint of the C. T. was issued by John Stowe, to which were added several Minor Poems mostly spurious. Thomas Speght republished the same edition in 1598 and again in 1602 with some additions and alterations, which, however, were of no importance for the C. T. Another reprint appeared in 1687, and in 1721 the edition of John Urry, with numerous gratuitous alterations, 'the worst that was ever published'.

Then followed the most valuable of the earlier editions, that of Thomas Tyrwhitt, in 1775—78, reissued, after the editor's death, in 1798, with a few corrections; reprinted again in 1855, etc.

Tyrwhitt is the first editor, after Thynne, who bases his text upon MSS., and has the good sense of following mainly such as belong to the Dd.-group¹⁾ (Dd., Hai., Ad.¹, called Ask.² by him), with occasional consultations of Har.⁴ (his 'C'), and the oldest prints (Cax. and Th.).

So his text of the P. T. approaches pretty well the modern ones which, like that of the present edition, are founded on the Ellesmere MS. Still, as he does not regularly note where he abandons the reading of the Dd.-group for some other, his text cannot be strictly considered as a critical one; e. g. he changes hem (l. 58)²⁾ into men, most likely introduced from Caxton or Thynne; the same l. 244

That they been (only Cax.); l. 333 how f. that; while l. 406 stile and l. 591 therof to sermoun seem to have been taken from Th. In other instances he has apparently followed the reading of Har.⁴; so l. 246 stinking is thy col; l. 358 he before that; l. 498 I shal say; l. 508 þe before towne; perhaps also l. 640 tonnes f. Miles, though a great number of other MSS. have here the same expression. Sometimes, however, it cannot be exactly ascertained from where Tyrwhitt took his readings deviating from the Dd.-group; so l. 120, where he correctly has tyme om. by all MSS. of this class; l. 317 Calidone for lacedomye; l. 326 som inserted after Sendeth, l. 341 others f. othes; l. 422 we f. they; l. 484 as inserted before than(ne), l. 583 of ins. before hym; l. 589 Hath for Hadde. The three latter cases are not found in any MS. now extant, but may have been the readings of his MS. 'Ask. 1', which has only lately been identified with the Ingilby MS. (s. Athenaeum, no. 3831, p. 405). But which of his MSS. may have contained the reading erneful (erneful?) for pitous in l. 14 (= 12236) mentioned by this editor? A few emendations discussed in his notes, however, only show his somewhat deficient knowledge of Chaucer's language and verse (s. l. 75 = 12297 ydrinken, l. 320 = 12542 yplaying).

In spite of these shortcomings, excusable considering the general state of philological knowledge at that period, Tyrwhitt's text of the C. T. remained for a long time the standard edition. It was re-issued several times, among others in 1845 with a new 'Life of Chaucer' by Sir Harris Nicolas, an essay on the value of which it is here not necessary to dwell. No new start was made till 1847, when Th. Wright published his edition first for the Percy Society, and afterwards for general circulation. Wright made the Harl. MS. (7334) his basis, declaring it was the oldest and best MS. known to him, and in doubtful instances collating it with the Lansdowne MS. (851; cp. below, ch. VI.). But if this editor pretended his text to be much more reliable than Tyrwhitt's, whom he accuses of ignorance of the grammar and language of Chaucer, this presumption is by no means borne out by his own critical method. On the contrary, in a great number of lines, metre and sense are entirely spoilt, in others he has gratuitously introduced alterations without marking them as such, etc. As we have here only to deal with the 'Pardoner', but a few instances from this portion of the work will be adduced to show the imperfections of Wright's edition¹): — W. pretends to give ll. 17 and 18 (13720—21 in his ed.) omitted in the Har.⁺-MS., according to Lan., but in fact follows the same reading as given by Tyrwhitt. No indication of an alteration is found in ll. 23, 34 (byten f. byt in Har.⁺), 58, 72, 86, 95, 166, 190—91 (Wr. notes that these two ll. are wanting in Har.⁺, but does not mention his source; he has taken them literally from Tw.); 230, 288, 301, 316 (unto f. to only found in Tw.), 326 (som), 333 (Wr. inserts how from Tw. [s. above] before that), 334, 353, 354 (my name or amys), 361, 381, 397, 415, 429, 431, 453, 465, 471, 483, 506 (We f. Be, like Tw.), 507, 519, 534, 545, 555, 589 (Hath = Tw.!), 591, 594, 600, 604, 613, 634, 644, in all which cases Wr. deviates from his original, but agrees with Tyrwhitt, and so, where nothing is remarked, with the present text. Sometimes he may have used another MS., and indeed there are several coincidences with Lan., among the readings enumerated before; but in others (s. ll. 190, 316, 333, 334, 429, 539, 545, 584, 591, 604, 613) the expression introduced by Wr. is not met with in this MS. And as in some of the above instances Wr. can only have derived his reading from Tw., it is most probable that he in most of his deviations from Har.⁴ he made his corrections from the text of his predecessor, whom he treats as quite untrustworthy!

So we see that Wright's edition does not deserve further consideration, except, perhaps, in a few of his explanatory notes.

Next we have to mention Robert Bell's 'Poetical Works of Geoffrey Chaucer' (London, 1861 II., 8 vols.), in which the notes on the C. T. and parts of the Introduction are due to the Rev. Jephson. The third volume (pp. 66 sqq.) contains the 'Prologue of the Pardoner' and 'The Pardoner's Tale'. The text differs very little from Wright's. Still there are a few instances in which Bell has wisely introduced Tyrwhitt's readings in preference to those of the former editor, where Wright has stuck to the evidently faulty expressions of the Har.⁴-MS.; e. g. l. 265. B. dronken nose, Wr. dronkenesse; l. 274 Now B., Ne Wr., T.; l. 288 That om. B. (superfluons); l. 416 boren f. sworne. Still Bell ought not to have restored 'omnium' before 'malorum' (ll. 46 & 138), which, as Wr. rightly remarks, overloads the metre.

In 1866 appeared, in the Aldine Edition of the British Poets, 'The Poetical Works of Geoffrey Chaucer', edited by Richard Morris, in 6 volumes, which were several times reprinted. The text of the C. T. (vols. II & III) is likewise based on the Har.⁴-MS. and has been collated, as the Preface (Vol. I, p. V) states, with the same Lansd. MS. as Wright's edition. 'In all doubtful or difficult passages', Mr. Morris adds, 'reference has been made to the manuscripts consulted by Tyrwhitt, as well as to some few others in the British Museum collections'. On p. VII he says 'All corrections of the original scribe in the Tales and other poems are printed in italics, so that the reader may see at a glance where the manuscript has been altered.' How far these statements are borne out by the other parts of the C. T., I have not examined, but for the P. T. they only partly hold good.

In a few instances, Morris¹⁾ follows the original MS. more closely than Wright (s. ll. 50, 138 [omnium = Bell.]; 301 ispoke [why i in italics?], 361 [The f. That], 506 [Be f. We]); but in general he adopts the emendations made by his forerunner, mostly marked in the print as mentioned above. But there are several cases where no italics are employed (s. ll. 40 [that], 148 [whiles that], 230 [the f. that, etc.], 295 [awyse], 316 [unto], 334 [book], 336 [hasard], 380 [first that], 381 [that]; 397 [this], 264 [Johan], 519 [thus], 555 [God], 591 [therof to], 613 [That], 644 [ye]). The passages where M. has apparently consulted MS. Lan., or, at any rate, has introduced alterations agreeing with this MS., but not found in Tw., Wr., and Be., are not numerous (s. ll. 13—14, 17—18, 26, 41, 151, 214 [and], 244, 236). On the other hand, some of his emendations are evidently taken from Tw., as Wr. adheres here to Har.⁴, and Lan. has another reading; s. ll. 24 (to erme), 238 (drynketh), 244 (There), 333 (loke — to), 423 (half), 528 (han). In a few cases it may be doubtful whether M. drew his corrections from Tw. or from Lan., with both of which he agrees in ll. 40, 148, 156 (spelling like Tw.: not, Lan. nouht), 234, 252, 258, 265, 274, etc. — For l. 326 (iciser) Morris seems to have used a MS. similar to Pe. (Petworth), whilst the readings l. 44 (which ins. before that) and l. 447 (i-be) are without the authority of a MS. So we see that this edition is not critical enough either to base grammatical or metrical researches upon, as some scholars have done, thus arriving at results afterwards more or less rejected by others.

The first real progress towards a thoroughly reliable text of the C. T. was not made till the Chaucer Society began their publication of the Six-Text Print, in 1868, the IV. Part of which, containing, among others, the Pardoner's Tale, came out in 1872. Though the principles on which the choice of the MSS. made for this purpose are much open to discussion — as Dr. Furnivall himself acknowledges in the 'Forewords' of his later reprint of the Har.⁴-MS. — a lucky chance would have it that among the MSS. thus published were representatives of four different groups, and the best text discovered hitherto, that of the Ellesmere MS. But as the value of all the texts of the 'Pardoner' is fully to be discussed in our VI. chapter, we shall not enter into any particulars now. Still we cannot pass over this occasion without thanking most heartily Dr. Furnivall for the energy and carefulness with which he has conducted this valuable enterprise.

The first attempts at a critical edition, with various readings, were made by ten Brink in 1871 (Marburg) and by Zupitza in 1882 (Berlin); but as both only published the General Prologue, it cannot be our task here to speak of the merits of these issues.

Nor does Prof. Skeat's edition of the 'Pardoner', mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, require a fuller treatment now, as it is the same learned editor to whom we owe the complete edition of Chaucer's Works, to which I shall have frequently occasion to refer my readers.

'The Poetical Works of Geoffrey Chaucer' edited by Arthur Gilman in 1879 (3 vols., New York) may next be adduced here to complete our list. But as the text of this publication does not mark any progress in the critical treatment of the MSS., according to Zupitza's judgment¹⁾, and its circulation, to my knowledge, is not a very wide one, a detailed comparison of its readings with those in other editions will scarcely be thought necessary.

Then the year 1894 brought two new editions of the C. T.: one made by Mr. A. W. Pollard for the Eversley Series, the other by Prof. W. W. Skeat, contained in his 'Complete Works of G. Chaucer', vol. IV, for the Clarendon Press. But neither editor having a clear conception how to handle the often diverging issues of a poetical production, how to classify them, and how to find the original reading, their texts are still far from being the standard for which they — at least Skeat's — are almost generally taken. But this deficiency can scarcely be wondered at if we learn that neither editor took the trouble of consulting Zupitza's 'Specimens of all the Accessible Unprinted Manuscripts of the Canterbury Tales' (s. below, ch. VI.), two parts of which must have been out before their publications were finished.

For Mr. Pollard's edition, I beg to refer to Zupitza's review in 'Archiv für das Studium der Neueren Sprachen', 94, pp. 441—46, and to the Globe-Edition below, the C. T. in which were also edited by the same author.

So far as Prof. Skeat's 'Pardoner' is concerned, all his deviations from the present text, will be taken notice of in the 'Notes' following after it. But imperfect as this portion of his work may be, the learned editor deserves full acknowledgment for his valuable explanations to this Tale and many other remarks dispersed here and there in his somewhat unwieldy publication. For though he has frequently embodied the fruits of the investigations of his

In 1895 Prof. Skeat issued a cheaper edition in one volume, entitled the 'Student's Chaucer', from which the bulky introductions and annotations of the original publication were omitted.

The text of the C. T. in the 'Globe Edition' of the Works of G. Chaucer (London 1898) is due, as already mentioned, to Mr. A. W. Pollard. But insufficient as this publication may be from a philological point of view¹), it may be (because of its cheapness) in the hands of many students, 'so that references to its deviating readings have been considered desirable.

Chapter II.

The Present Edition

distinguishes itself from its forerunners chiefly by utilizing, for the first time, the whole critical apparatus. After discussing the value of all the fifty-five MSS. and old Prints containing the Pardoner's Tale and its accessories, it tries to establish their genealogy, and so to find out the precise MS. on which its text should be based. Or, perhaps, I ought to say that the present edition gives a comprehensive account of the former researches on this subject made by Prof. Zupitza and myself, in order to find the safest foundation upon which such a work is to be erected. I have, however, renounced the project of adding a pictorial pedigree, as the drawing of such a one would be too puzzling, if done on so small a scale as to fit with the size of this book. But I hope that every reader will be able to supply this drawing by a careful perusal of the description of the MSS. and their division into types, groups, undergroups, etc.

¹) S. my criticisms in Archiv, etc., vol. 102, pp. 410 sqq.; and Engl. Studien. vol. 27, pp. 1 sqq.

The Various Readings of all these texts are conscientiously noted down, but it would have required at least double the space if all indifferent varieties of spelling, inclusive of the tags and flourishes of certain letters, so carefully marked in the reprints of the Chaucer-Society, should have been reproduced also. So my readers must be satisfied with receiving here a complete list of the deviations from the critical text as far as they affect grammar, style, and versification, whilst such as would also study the dialect and the punctuation of the different MSS. must turn to the print of them published by the Chaucer Society.

But the minutest alterations made in the text of the fundamental MS. have been duly registered, and also such instances in other MSS. are adduced when it appeared doubtful which way of spelling was preferable, e. g. whether we should write goodman, or good man, or goode man, etc.

As for the principles of Chaucer's language and versification, I have chiefly followed Ten Brink¹⁾, whose views have been partly modified by Kittredge's 'Observations on the Language of Chaucer's Troilus'.²⁾ Also the Outlines of the poet's Phonetics and Grammar drawn by Prof. Skeat in his Great Edition, vol. VI, pp. XXIII—LXXXV, will be found trustworthy guides on the whole, though I must take exception to some of his rules on Versification. For I quite agree with O. Bischoff³⁾, who rejects the occurrence of an additional syllable in the interior of Chaucer's ten-syllable verse, which Skeat allows (l. c. p. LXXXV sqq). On the other hand, I am of the latter's opinion that we must admit the occasional dropping of the first unaccented syllable (the Auftakt).¹⁾

While I anticipate that every reader who wishes to make use of this edition has acquired the fundamental knowledge contained in these books²⁾, I have thought it useful to many students now and then to give hints as to Chaucer's Syntax or the historical development of the English language since his time, for which I frequently refer to Eduard Mätzner's Englische Grammatik (3 vols, Berlin, 1860), to the 'Historische Grammatik der englischen Sprache', by C. Friedrich Koch, the second volume of which was re-edited by J. Zupitza in 1878, and to E. Einenkel's 'Streifzüge durch die mittlenglische Syntax unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der Sprache Chaucer's' (Münster 1887). Besides the observations of this character, I only touch in my 'Notes' such questions of phonology and grammar as still require consideration; e. g. whether we should always write o before -n + consonant; whether Chaucer regularly used may for move as a plural, etc. A great number of these 'Notes', however, are devoted to the explanation of difficult passages or literary allusions, in which I mostly follow former Editors, and I hope never to have omitted acknowledging this indebtedness.

²⁾ Of course, there exist also other books and essays to which the student's attention should be drawn, as for instance Lorenz Morsbach's Mittelenglische Grammatik, or W. Dibelius' John Capgrave und die englische Schriftsprache, in Anglia N. F. XI, but a full enumeration of them I leave to each student's Professor.

Instead of appending a little Glossary, I have incorporated the equivalents in modern English of such words or phrases as are now quite obsolete or have changed their signification, into the bulk of my other notes, thinking by this means to facilitate the work of preparation for students, who will now find all they want in the way of explanation combined in the same place. Sometimes I have added the corresponding German expression, when I found Hertzberg's rendering of the passage in question particularly striking or happy.

Though I have thus endeavoured to make the present edition as useful as possible to teachers and learners, I do not pretend to have produced a work that may in all respects serve as a model for future Editors of the Canterbury Tales. For, at the present time, I am not prepared finally to decide all questions concerning the restoration of a critical text of our poet. Among them I will only mention the question of spelling. The Ellesmere MS., though on the whole a very good one, was written before the middle of the 15th century, and it is very uncertain how far it represents Chaucer's own orthography. In a former publication of mine ¹⁾ I have tried to discover the leading principles of the spelling of MSS. nearer the poet's time, and though I still believe that I was on the right way then, I am not so sure about all particulars as to introduce them into the present Edition. Nor can I agree with the normalisation recommended by ten Brink ²⁾; useful as it may be for grammatical researches, a critical text should give a truer picture of Chaucer's own writing than we should get by following the apparent rules of the Ellesmere MS. Still less satisfactory is Prof. Skeat's system of spelling, who gratuitously modifies the same scribe's practise, on which he makes some general remarks, but without mentioning the single instances in which he deviates from his MS. But so long as the solution of this problem remains doubtful, I have thought it advisable to reproduce the MS. chosen as the basis of the text as closely as possible, even keeping its u for v, its i for j, its ff for F. etc., and to make only alterations when the rules of grammar and versification to which Chaucer generally adheres render them necessary. But all such deviations have been carefully marked and the reasons for them stated in the 'Notes'.

²⁾ S. my article in Engl. Stud. X, p. 115.

So my edition has not the ambition of exactly restoring the original, but only aims at representing the text as if the scribe of the best MS. in existence had copied it more carefully and from a better source than evidently was at his disposal.

There are only a few remarks on the external appearance of my text to be added. As for the numbering of the lines, I have begun to count from 1, as it seemed to me absurd to commence with another number according to some of the former editions, which mostly differ in that respect, each following the order of the Tales as given in the respective fundamental MS. But as the latest publications (Skeat's and Pollard's) have adopted the scheme according to which Dr. Furnivall has arranged the Prints for the Chaucer Society, I have thought it useful to add their figures in brackets, in order to facilitate the finding of the references to these publications.

The abbreviations in the Various Readings scarcely require a lengthy explanation; so it will suffice to point out that the order of the MSS. which offer the same reading agrees with their enumeration in the Chapter on their genealogy, i. e. the first named belong to the E.-Dd.-group, the second ones to the Gg.-group, &c. To separate these groups more distinctly, a semicolon is placed between the respective MSS. When several MSS. have different deviations from the E.-text, these are separated only by commas from the foregoing one. The deviations of former Editors, so far as they agree with the MS. on which they are based have as a rule not been mentioned; their pretended emendations, however, are either merely registered in chapter I., or, if of any importance, are discussed in the Notes.

Chapter III.

The Place of the Pardoner's Tale in the Frame of the Canterbury Tales.

As the C. T. were left unfinished by Chaucer, we must not expect that he had definitely settled the arrangement of the Tales, though we find some indications in what order he intended to make them follow each other. There are nine different fragments, each of them consisting of a group of Tales linked together by prologues or transitions, only the Man of Lawe's Tale standing isolated. But it is not always clear which of these groups the poet meant to precede or to follow another, though there are dispersed in them allusions to the time of the day, or the place which the pilgrims on their way to Canterbury were approaching, or from which they had started. For sometimes these allusions are very vague, sometimes they are quite absent from a group of Tales, so that an entirely satisfactory solution of this problem cannot be arrived at. Nor do the MSS. help us very much in a final arrangement, as the order of these fragments partly differs in their different groups, so far as their contents are known to us at present: even within one and the same group there are great divergencies.¹⁾ The easiest way to get out of these difficulties would be to follow ten Brink²⁾, who adopts the arrangement found in the Ellesm. MS, as it is on the whole the most reliable one, and is for the most part supported by the better MSS. of other groups. But then we shall see that the VII. fragment must certainly be placed before the III., as the places mentioned in this latter are farther off from London than those in the former.

Dr. Furnivall did certainly a very meritorious work in discussing this puzzling object thoroughly in his Temporary Preface, p. 16. sqq., and his results have been accepted by many, e. g. by Skeat³⁾ and by Pollard,⁴⁾ though some of his conclusions are not much more than ingenious guesses. So he makes the pilgrimage last three and a half days, whilst in my opinion⁵⁾ one day less seems more probable; so the Pardoner's Tale is perhaps placed too early, before the third group, whereas it belongs in nearly all MSS. to the sixth. The only reason for this arrangement is that there is in it an allusion to an early hour of the day (s. ll. 33 sqq.), the Pardoner wishing to take some refreshment at a wayside inn, which he would not have done shortly before the common dinner of the company. But this might have happened on any day of the pilgrimage, and can, alone, not settle this question.

The only certainty we have about this Tale is that it is 'inseparably' linked to the Doctor's Tale, which precedes it. This is made evident by the opening lines, in which 'oure hoste' addresses the Physician (s. Note 1 below). Dr. Furnivall, who marks his groups with the letters from A to I, designates these two Tales with C, and begins the numeration of lines with the first verse of the Doctor's Tale, as no genuine Prologue exists. Thus the first line of the Doctor-Pardoner Link, included in this Edition, receives number 287, which I, however, have altered into 1 again, as stated before. But in all other references to the text of the C. T., I follow the designations used in the Six-Text Print, and adopted by Skeat and Pollard.

As for the Date of the Pardoner's Tale, we are not much better off, for no allusion to public events of the time, or to the poet's life and works appears in it. The same is to be said of its immediate predecessor, the Doctor's Tale,¹⁾ so that we must content ourselves again with suppositions.

In my 'Chronology, &c'²⁾ I have tried to show that the date of the pilgrimage, which cannot have been a merely fictitious one, was the 18th - 20th of April, 1385, whilst ¹⁾ Prof. ten Brink (Gesch. d. engl. Litt. II, 124) takes ll. 93-102 of this Tale, treating about the education of children, as an allusion to Chaucer's own case, since after the death of his wife (about 1387), he alone was responsible for his children being properly brought up. But in my opinion, such an interpretation of that passage is too vague and uncertain.

²⁾ S. §§ 27, 28 and 36.

Prof. Skeat¹⁾ assigns this event to the year 1387, but without taking into consideration that at that time Chaucer was in such distressed circumstances, that he would have scarcely been in a humour to invent the General Prologue with all its mirth and fun. As no valid objection has been made to my date, so far as I know, I still believe that it is after all the most likely one. But I do not mean to say that Chaucer instantly set to work to execute his plan — if he had conceived such a one already on the return from his journey to Canterbury —, but that the first portion of the Tales (Prologue and Group A) was probably not composed before the year 1386, as in 1385 he was still occupied with his Legend of Good Women. When he had got so far as the Man of Lawe's Prologue, he seems to have been interrupted by some misfortunes in his life, and not to have continued his work until his situation had improved again, which was in 1389.

The short period of comparative prosperity lasted till about 1391,²⁾ when Chaucer again lost his latest appointment, and during this time I suppose he wrote the brightest and most finished portions of the C. T., his 'Wife of Bath', the Shipman's and the Nuns' Priest's Tales, etc. among which I also reckon the 'Pardoner'. That this Tale cannot belong to the stock which Chaucer had ready before he began to execute his C. T. (like the Second Nun's Tale) is shown by its metre, the heroic couplet, which, apparently was not employed by him before he wrote his Legend of Good Women (1384—85), and by its absence from the catalogue of the poet's works in the Prologue of this poem (s. ll. 416 sqq.). But some more circumstances which point to a later composition of the Pardoner's Tale can be adduced: there are a few deviations in the description of the Pardoner's property from the same in the General Prologue (s. the V. Chapter below), so that the former must have been written some time after the latter. Then, the way in which the Pardoner is introduced as an interlocutor into the Wife of Bath's Prologue (v. l. c.) seems to indicate that the latter was composed before his own tale, as there is not the least hint to be found there of his having already narrated his story. Thus the approximate date would be 1390—91.

Chapter IV.

The Sources of the Pardoner's Tale.

The original from which Chaucer took the subject of his story of 'the Robbers and the Treasure-Trove' is not known, but, as Mr. Wright supposes, it may have been an old French fabliau now lost. Still there are a number of traditions resembling more or less Chaucer's Tale still extant in various Asiatic and European languages. Among these the form most approaching that of our poet is contained in the Italian collection entitled 'Cento Novelle Antiche', as already pointed out by Tyrwhitt. Its nearest relative is the version in Nov. LXXXII of the edition of 1572, reprinted, together with an earlier version (1525) and a Latin Novella (by Morlinus) by Dr. Furnivall in his 'Originals and Analogues of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales' (1875), Pt. II, pp. 131—33, and again by Prof. Skeat in his Edition, Vol. III, pp. 440—42.

But this is by no means the earliest shape of this story handed down to us; it was Rev. Dr. R. Morris who first, in 1881, discovered its oldest version, in one of the Buddhist Birth-Stories, entitled 'Vedabbha Jātaka', and after him

(in 1883) Mr. H. H. Francis and Professor Tawney, each independently, pointed out the same text as the original of Chaucer's Tale. For particulars see Mr. W. A. Clouston's valuable Essay in the continuation of the 'Originals and Analogues', mentioned before, Pt. V., pp. 417 sqq. (1887) and Skeat's Ed., l. c., p. 443. The contents of this story are shortly the following: — A Bráhmán, Vedabbha by name, knew a powerful spell by which he could make a rain of precious things fall from heaven. Once, wandering with Gautama as his pupil (who tells the story), he was taken captive by five hundred thieves. Whilst they sent away the pupil to fetch wealth, they kept the Bráhmán for their security. But when the latter had been waiting for some time to be released, he repeated the spell, in spite of Gautama's warning that, by doing so, he would cause his death and that of many other men, and made a rain of wealth descend from heaven. The thieves collected this treasure, but soon afterwards were made prisoners by another five hundred thieves, who cut down the Bráhmán, because he was now unable to work the same miracle for them, pursued the other thieves, and slew them all. Then they began to fight amongst themselves for the treasure that had now fallen into their hands, until only two men remained alive. While one of them is guarding their wealth, the other goes to a village to have some rice cooked, in which he puts poison in order to get rid of the other man, and to have the whole treasure for himself. On his return he is slain by his comrade, who eats of the poisoned rice, and dies at once. Soon after Gautama returns with the wealth he had been sent for, and finding all these men dead, he sets forth the moral lesson contained in a stanza, beginning, 'He who desires advantage unseasonably, he is afflicted, etc.'

Then Mr. Clouston gives the texts of a Persian version, three Arabian ones, a Kashmiri and a Tibetan version, all later than the 'Vedabbha Játaka', and shortly relates the contents of an Italian Miracle Play, some German reproductions (one by Hans Sachs), a French, and a Portuguese one, more or less differing in some minor details from the foregoing tale. In conclusion Mr. Clouston remarks that one feature of the original, the warning to the Bráhmán, is kept only by the first mentioned Italian version, by H. Sachs, and by Chaucer.¹⁾

Prof. Skeat, l. c. p. 445, adds the titles of two modern English versions, one brought out by the Rev. W. Lipscomb in 1792, the other found in Leigh Hunt's Poems, entitled 'Death and the Ruffians'.

Another interesting contribution towards this subject is found in Prof. J. Bolte's edition of Martin Montanus' 'Schwankbücher' (Tübingen 1899), p. 564, note ¹⁾, though the story itself to which these additional references are appended is only loosely connected with some versions of Chaucer's Tale. Among others, Prof. Bolte mentions some modern German reproductions, one found in Geibel's Works (IV, 114), another in 'Fliegende Blätter' (1884), and a third — kindly communicated to me by letter — in Christoph v. Schmid's 'Gesammelte Schriften' (16, 216).²⁾

As for some of his Moral Reflexions embodied in the 'Pardoner', Chaucer appears to have borrowed them partly from Pope Innocent's treatise 'De Contemptu Mundi', or otherwise 'De Miseria Conditionis Humanae', as Prof. Koepfel has pointed out in Herrig's Archiv, vol. 84, p. 411, (cp. Skeat, l. c., p. 444—5), perhaps versified from the poet's own translation now lost, but mentioned in the Prologue of his Legend of Good Women (A, l. 414).

For other passages (s. notes to ll. 186, 216, 241, etc.), Chaucer evidently made use of the treatise forming his 'Persones Tale', a translation of some chapters from the 'Somme de Vices et de Vertus' by Frere Lorens.¹⁾ So it appears that this Tale was written before the 'Pardoner' was begun. Sometimes our poet seems to have borrowed from the 'Polycraticus' of Johannes Salisburiensis (John of Salisbury), bishop of Chartres (who died in 1180), — s. note to l. 303 — though the Rev. W. Woolcombe in his Essay 'On the Sources of the Wife of Bath's Prologue' thinks that Chaucer took these passages directly from St. Jerome's book against Jovinianus (Hieronymus contra Jovinianum).²⁾

On some occasional coincidences with other authors, it will be sufficient here to refer to the Notes,³⁾ especially as it appears that Chaucer often took his quotations at second hand, so that we cannot directly call his source every writing with which some agreement is found in his works.

Chapter V.

The Pardoner.

That Chaucer's description of his Pardoner is by no means exaggerated, has been shown by Dr. J. J. Jusserand in a short treatise entitled 'Chaucer's Pardoner and the Pope's Pardoners', written in 1880, and published in the 'Essays on Chaucer, his Words, and Works' (Chaucer Society, II^d Series, 19, pp. 423—436). He quotes several circulars and decrees of popes (e. g., one of Boniface IX. of the year 1390) and bishops, from which we learn that, besides the authorised pardoners or quaestores, there were numerous others 'who dispensed with the ecclesiastical licence, and wandered like pedlars from one district to another, trafficking in pardons'. They pretended to come from the court of Rome (Gen. ProL. l. 671), and showed the people patents and bulls (P. T. l. 48 sqq.), the seals of which were mostly forged. They took the liberty of preaching in churches (P. Pr. ll. 41 sqq., note, and Gen. ProL. l. 708 sqq.) though they were only laymen, and kept all the money gained by selling indulgences for themselves. Some even formed private associations to abuse the confidence of the public, whilst others were employed by the Hospitallers to sell absolutions, etc. for the benefit of this Order, and for their own as well.

To this latter class Chaucer's Pardoner seems to have belonged, as 'Rouncivale' (cp. Gen. ProL., l. 679, Hertzberg's translation, Note on p. 592, and Skeat's Note, V, p. 55), was one of those establishments. So I am not quite of the opinion of Dr. Jusserand, who thinks (s. l. c., p. 425), that the signatures of his Documents were also forged, which our poet does not exactly state. Certain it is, however, that his Pardoner made a good profit by his sale, as his private gains were a hundred marks (cf. note to l. 102) a year, and that he led the same profligate life with which his fellows were frequently reproached (s. P. T. ll. 151—163). The abominable way in which he utilised churches for his most worldly purposes and his other tricks to impose upon his hearers are well exposed in the Gen. ProL. ll. 701 sqq. and P. T. ll. 41 sqq.¹). But for the description of his counterfeited relics,¹⁾ the two passages do not entirely agree with each other. In the Gen. Prol., l. 700, Chaucer says:—

And in a glass he hadde pigges bones, whilst in the P. T. l. 59 he speaks of several 'longe cristal stones', in which there are not only 'bones', but also 'cloutes'. In the former place (699) the Pardoner has 'a croys of latoun ful of stones', whilst in the latter (l. 62 sq.) he has 'in latoun a sholder boon' of wonderful capacities. 'Oure lady veyl' made of a 'pilwebeer' (pillow case) and the 'gobet' of St. Peter's sail mentioned in the Prol. (ll. 394—97) are not alluded to again in the Tale, whilst in the latter a miraculous 'Miteyn' (l. 84) is produced which is not found in the Gen. Prol. So it appears that Chaucer wrote the Pardoner's Prologue some time after he had composed the General Prologue (s. above, ch. III), when the tenor of his former description was not quite present to his memory. At any rate, he did not trouble himself to make a later drawn picture exactly agree with an earlier cast of it.

A few words may be added about the external appearance of this worthy Pardoner as sketched by the poet in the Gen. Prol., ll. 675—90. His hair was as yellow as wax; it hung on his shoulders like a 'strike of fler', where it lay thin 'by colpons' (bundles, shreds). He had no beard, his face was as smooth as if it had been lately shaved. His eyes were as glaring as those of a hare. He wore no hood, as the other travellers did, in order to appear more fashionable (of the neue jet), but only a cap on which was sown a 'vermycle' as a token of his having come from a pilgrimage. His voice was as treble as a goat's, but he was fond of singing a love song (l. 672), in which his friend, the 'Somonour', would accompany him with his bass. But best he sang an offertory (l. 710), after which he used to preach a sermon like the one described in the Pard. Prol., l. 41 sqq.

But these are not the only passages in the C. T. where Chaucer introduces this curious figure evidently drawn from life; he makes him also an interlocutor in the Wife of Bath's Prologue (D., l. 162 sqq.), asking, as a young man, the advice of this experienced matron whether it would be wise of him to take a wife, as he at one time intended to do, which idea he has now, however, abandoned¹⁾ (Cp. above, ch. III.).

If, towards the end of his tale (ll. 658 sqq.), the host makes fun of the Pardoner and his doubtful reliques, by which he provokes the laughter of all other fellow-pilgrims, we must not conclude that Chaucer meant to ridicule the regular institutions of the Church, but only the gross abuses introduced at his time, the same as Langland had done in the 'Vision of Piers the Plowman' (s. Dr. Jusserand's Essay, p. 429).

As for the MSS. numbered 56)—63), the Clerkes Tale is being printed from them as a specimen to show their value and classification.

Of the 55 MSS. and early prints which come into consideration here, 7 were printed in full as publications of the Chaucer Society, viz. E., Hen., Gg., Co., Pe., and Lan., forming the Six-Text Print in parallel columns, and Har.⁴, published as a single text by Dr. Furnivall in 1886. The part of the former containing the Pardoner's Tale was first issued in 1872 and reprinted in 1888 (First Series XXV, Part IV of the Six-Text Print), pp. 312—332, to which were added 'Specimens of the various readings in the Doctor-Pardoner-Link, &c.', taken from 25 other MSS.

From the remaining 46 MSS. of the above list only the Doctor-Pardoner-Link, the Pardoner's Prologue, and the Pardoner's Tale have been published by the Ch. S. as 'Specimens of all the Accessible Unprinted Manuscripts of the Canterbury Tale' (First Series, Nos. LXXXI, LXXXV, LXXXVI, XC, and XCI), according to the classification of the late Professor J. Zupitza, who also wrote the Prefaces to the first three parts, whilst those of the next two were done by me.

The first of these instalments, published in 1892, though it is dated as the Society's issue for 1890, contains the seven MSS. forming the so-called Dd.-group, viz. Dd., Hai., Dev., Ch., In., Ad.¹, and No.

In the third part, published in 1895 as the Society's issue for 1893, six MSS. belonging to the so-called Corpus-group are printed; viz.: Sl.², Tc.², Ne., Har.³, Hel., and Ii.

By this time Lord Ashburnham, the owner of four MSS. of the C. T., who would not allow access to them, had died, and his valuable collection was sold by auction. So Dr. Furnivall was at last enabled, through the kindness of the buyers of these 4 MSS., to examine them, and to have extracts of them copied for the Chaucer Society. Three of these, containing the P. T., were printed in 1900 as the fifth part of the Specimens (for 1898) together with reprints from Caxton's two editions, and from Thynne, so that this instalment is formed by Ash.¹, Ash.², Ash.⁴, Cax.¹, Cax.², and Th.

Still another Chaucer MS. in the Library of the College of Physicians in London, hitherto unknown to all Chaucerians, was lately discovered by Dr. Furnivall, and its 'Pardoner' text published as a Supplement to the last-named instalment.

The last find of the indefatigable Editor in Chief of the Chaucer Society, however, is the Hodson MS. 39, paper, dated about 1460 A. D. = Hod., but not published yet, though proof sheets of its 'Pardoner' were at the present author's disposal.

According to Zupitza's careful researches, the results of which have been partly corroborated, partly supplemented by my own, these 55 early texts must be divided into two large Types or seven Groups, mentioned, though not completely arranged in the foregoing section.

In this classification I somewhat deviate from Prof. Zupitza, who only divides the MSS., as far as they were known to him, into single groups; still more do I deviate from Prof. Skeat (s. Vol. IV. of his Edition, pp. VIII sqq.), who arranges them into four types. His Type A comprises my groups I and II, which he does not distinguish; his Type B corresponds to my group III, his Type C, to my group VI, his Type D, to my group VII, so that he has overlooked the existence of groups IV and V, the texts of which he partly places under the head of C., partly under that of D. As some of the MSS. were not accessible to him when his Edition was preparing, he, of course, cannot be made answerable for their omission, but if he had utilised Zupitza's researches laid down in Specimens I and II, which were issued before his (Skeat's) work can have complete, he might have avoided a few errors in his classifications, which, however, need not be dwelt upon here.

As for my own arrangement, I beg to point out that I only take into consideration the text of the 'Pardoner', leaving aside the other Tales and their arrangement in the different MSS. of the Canterbury Tales, firstly because only part of their contents are sufficiently known, and, secondly, because a discussion of this very complicated question would take up more space than is appropriate for a special edition like the present one. On the whole, however, I think that my classification will hold good also for the rest of the C. T., though some MSS. may have been derived in different portions, from different sources (e. g. Pa.; s. below ch. VI., no. 16).

The two Types, A and B, into which I divide all texts extant now, are formed, A by the E.-Dd.-and the Gg.-group., B, by the Har.⁴-, Tc.¹-, Se.-, Co.-, and Pe.-groups (cp. Specimens II, §§ 10 sq.). This is clearly shown by the readings found in ll. 9, 89, 101, 106, 187, 249, 256, 284, 288, 315, 316, 342, 400, 436, 442, 472, 476, 509, 520, 569, 597, 603, 604, 607, and 640; not quite so certain are those in ll. 4, 10, 57, 78, 138, 337, 433, 529, 538; but if a few MSS. belonging to one Type have adopted readings occurring in the other, these are later alterations, as will be shown in every single case. These two Types evidently go back to one common source, which, however was not the Poet's original MS., as there are some mistakes occurring in all or nearly all MSS. (e. g. ll. 538 and 644).

Type A.

I. The E.-Dd.-group (cf. Specimens I, § 3), which appears to be the most correct on the whole, avoiding the mistakes occurring more or less in all other groups; s. the various readings in ll. 30, 43, 68, 104, 264, 364—66, 505, 529, etc.; less certain is l. 304.

a) The E.-undergroup is formed by E., Hen., and Phy.

1. E. is generally considered as the best MS. of the C. T. that has been preserved to us, not only because of the comparative correctness of its text, but on account of its grammar and spelling (cp. pp. 44—50 in Dr. Furnivall's Temporary Preface, &c., Ch. S., 2nd Series, 3). Among other peculiarities it has, perhaps most regularly of all, kept the weak -e in its right places, and avoided the addition of this letter in cases where other MSS., owing to the gradual disappearance of this sound in the 15th century, have affixed it wrongly: which circumstance shows that its scribe endeavoured to copy his original as exactly as possible. But in spite of this apparently painstaking labour, E. cannot be considered as an entirely reliable reproduction of the poet's original. On the contrary, there are several readings, even in the small portion of the C. T. edited here, where its copyist has spoiled the metre or sense (the more doubtful ones of which are discussed in my Notes), e. g. ll. 62, 97, 301, 348, 356, 508, 515, 519, 529, 538, 560, 592, 666, etc.

2. Hen., the second best of the Six-Text, according to Dr. Furnivall (Temp. Preface, p. 50—51); evidently a copy of the same original as E., but not a direct copy of E., which is shown by the foregoing quotations; but that E. cannot be a copy of Hen. either, will be seen from a few mistakes occurring in the latter; e. g. ll. 26, 62, 293, 422, 423, 489, 626, 653, etc.

3. Phy. (cp. Specimens, V, pp. 49 sqq.), the worst of the three, being very corrupt in passages where most or all other MSS. have correct readings; e. g. ll. 6, 37, 38, 55, 62, 63—65, 139—40, etc. Still it is not without interest, sometimes corroborating the readings of E., sometimes those of Hen., which is shown by part of the above quotations. — On the other hand, Phy. agrees with MSS. of the Dd.-gr., deviating from E. and Hen.; e. g. 43, 52, 73, 88, 171, 224, 236, 268, 285, 290, 383, 467, 572, etc. But as the same readings occur also in MSS. belonging to other classes, these coincidences cannot be considered as strict proofs that the scribe of Phy. made use of several other MSS., though he may have occasionally consulted one similar to In., *Ad.*¹, or No.

b) The Dd.-undergroup is composed of Dd., Hai., Dev., Ch., In., *Ad.*¹, and No. That these MSS. go back to a lost common source is shown by the readings in a) formed by Dd., Dev., Hai., Hod., and No.; cp. the readings (s. Spec. I, § 6) in ll. 1, 7 (dev. in Hod.), 31, 36, 334, 399, 506, 622; less decisive are those in ll. 8, 43, 66, 290, 324, 339, 417, 458, 545 etc.

ll. 45—46, 50, 55, 56, 57, 58, 120, 251, and 532. (cp. Specimens I. § 5). — This undergroup is again divided into two classes: —

4. Dd. is often more correct than the other three, which proves that Dev., Hai. Hod., and No. must go back to a common source, of which Dd. is independent. It has better readings (cp. I. §§ 7—8) in the following cases: ll. 43, 70, 104, 128, 142, 258, 265, 285, 334, 367, 369, 400, 675, etc.: whilst its mistakes where Hai., Dev., Hod., and No. are more correct are only very few (s. ll. 62, 365, 481).

5. Hai. and

6. Dev. go back to the same source, a MS. now lost. This is proved by a number of deviations from the rest of this group which these two MSS. have in common (cp. Spec. I, § 9), e. g. ll. 6, 10, 32, 69, 76, 91, 101, 160, 163, 166, 180, 183, 206, 317, 362, 375, 383, 400, 461, 476, 524, 534, 544, 568, 612, 632, etc. But that neither can be the source of the other is shown by their readings in the following ll. (cp. Spec. I, §§ 10—11): 12, 89, 108, 169, 242, 247, 473, 483, 502, 584 sqq.

7. Hod. has a number of readings in common with Hai. and Dev. (s. ll. 6, 32, 91, 180, 461, 524, 568, etc.). But that their original cannot have been the direct source of Hod., is shown by several passages where the latter is more correct; s. ll. 7, 69, 76, 107, 160, 163, 189, 206, 317, 362, 369, 375, 383, 400, 612, 632, etc. In a few instances, Hod. has even better readings than this whole class: s. ll. 136, 324, 409, 489. On the other hand, it has mistakes not occurring in any other MS., so that none can have been derived from it; s. ll. 1, 7 (so), 16, 23, 48, 54, 104, 238, 287, 322, 391, 395, 408, 423, 444, 475, 493, 500, 577, 598, 630, 654, etc.

But there are also traces that Hod. must have been influenced by some MS. of the B-Type: thus it inserts the spurious verses found between ll. 10 and 11 in the Har.⁴- and Co.-groups and in a few MSS. of the Pe.-group, between ll. 12 and 13, the same place, in which Har.⁵ and Ash.² have them. There however not being any other particular similarities between Hod. and these two, we may suppose that this coincidence is an accidental one. But there are other agreements between Hod. and MSS. of the B-Type (s. ll. 78, 95, 118, 143, 196, 203, 284, 487, 530, 539, 555, 640), which make such an influence extremely probable, especially the last quoted instance. If we now consider that, in all these cases, representatives of the Har.⁴-group are concerned, and we take into regard the readings in ll. 163, 258, 290, 456 and 587, in which Har.⁴ or Pa. are nearly isolated, we must conclude that the MS. of which Hod. made occasional use must have belonged to the Har.⁴-group, though it cannot have been one of those now extant. The few cases in which Hod. agrees with Se., Hat., Th., or Gl. (s. ll. 24, 241, 300, 476, 581, 584) are not numerous or decisive enough to render the assumption of a third source necessary.

8. No. is the most corrupt MS. of this group, frequently altering or omitting not only single words, but often enough spoiling entirely the sense of the whole passage. It must suffice to point out some of the numerous readings of this sort (cp. I, § 12). The Doctor-Pardoner-Link (ll. 1—40) is wanting, the same as in a few other MSS. (s. p. LXV sq.); besides ll. 157—58, ll. 161—62, ll. 601—604, are missing. Further s. the readings in ll. 67, 79, 81, 88, 99, 116, 129, 135, 150, 182, 183, 199, 200, 215, 260, 261, 315, 384, 427, 429, 514, 605, 623 etc.

β) The second class of the Dd.-group is formed by Ch., In., and Ad.¹, (cp. I, § 13) which share several peculiar readings; s. ll. 17, 66, 267, 353, 589, 603, etc.

9. Ch. is the most correct of this class, which follows from its being free from the numerous mistakes occurring in the two other MSS.

10. In. and

11. Ad.¹, which agree in most readings (cp. Sp. I, § 14) deviating not only from the other MSS. of the same group, but frequently from all together; e. g. in ll. 8, 12, 31, 33, 41, 72, 76, 98, 114, 118, 134, 153, 190—91, 198, 213, 246, 312, 356, 366, 368, 383, 391, 395, 405, 423, 458, 476, 497, 500, 529, 537, 545, 555, 566, 589, 610, etc. — But In. cannot be the source of Ad.¹, as the former has a few mistakes where the latter is right or nearly so (l. c. I, § 16); e. g. ll. 143, 189, 266, 274—75, 376, 446, 498, etc. Much more frequent, however, are the instances in which Ad.¹ is corrupt, whilst the reading of In. is correct, or at least better (s. I, § 15); e. g. ll. 4, 75, 110, 112, 118, 163, 180, 258, 304, 349, 359, 372, 387, 408, 428, 439, 442, 464, 490, 521, 526, etc.

But that Ch. cannot be the original from which the common source of In. and Ad.¹ was derived is shown by several mistakes occurring in the former alone or, at least, in no other MS. of the Dd.-group (s. I, § 17); e. g. ll. 35, 38, 48, 89, 95, 121, 186, 205, 300, 334, 405, 411, 466, 470, 593, 658, 669, etc. For the discussion of some doubtful points and a pedigree of the Dd.-gr., s. ib. §§ 19—20., and below no. 49.

II. The Gg.-group, consisting of Gg., Ph.¹, and Bo.² For its characteristic readings, s. Specimens II, § 3 (ll. 576, 594, 596, 666, 676; for those of Gg. and Bo.² cp. ll. 124, 358, 383, 449).

12. Gg. is unfortunately not complete, having lost two leaves (besides similar mutilations in other parts) containing the conclusion of the Doctor's Tale, the Doctor-Pardoner-Link, and the Pardoner's Preamble as far as l. 98 (386 of the Six-Text Print). Also ll. 455—56 are absent. For its specialities, s. Dr. Furnivall's Temp. Pref., pp. 51—59. — Though one of our oldest MSS. of the C. T. (dated about 1430—40), it cannot be the source of the two others belonging to the same group, which is shown by the following readings (cp. Spec. II, §§ 5 and 8): ll. 126, 175, 221, 234, 300, 361, 371, 374, 391, 431, 504, 536, 549, 550, 557, 568, 590, 591, 620, 646, 660, etc.

13. *Ph.*¹ is still more mutilated, only ll. 543—680 being left of our text. As far as can be judged from these 138 verses, it seems nearer related to Gg. than to Bo.², having a few mistakes in common with the former of which the latter is free (cp. Spec. II, § 4); s. ll. 560, 561, 614, 655). If it were not a younger MS. (Dr. Furnivall dates it ab. 1440, s. Spec. II, § 6), it might be considered as the source of Gg., but without knowing more of its further contents, the question must be left undecided for the present.

14. *Bo.*² is the most complete MS. of this group; still, as it has a good many faults of its own so far as it can be compared with the two others, it cannot be considered as a reliable representative of this group for the portions wanting in Gg. and *Ph.*¹; at any rate, it is evident that *Bo.*² is not the source of either (cp. Spec. II, § 7); s. its readings in ll. 103, 155, 214, 250, 265, 306, 320, 381—82, 392, 393—94, 414, 450, 465, 505, 594, 623, 640, etc.

Type B.

III. The Har.⁴-group., formed by Har.⁴, Pa., Har.⁵, and Ash.²; for its characteristic readings s. Spec. II, § 9, and Spec. V, § 2 (viz. ll. 10*, 11* [s. Note to l. 10] 14, 25, 31, 32, 34, 58, 39, 186, and in the part missing in Har.⁵, l. 529).

15. *Har.*⁴ For particulars concerning this MS., s. Temp. Pref. pp. 7—8, 70—85, and Dr. Furnivall's Edit. of the Harleian MS. 7334, Forewords. Though one of the oldest MSS. of the C. T. we possess, it is less reliable than the better ones of the A.-Type; as it is not only damaged by the loss of several leaves, but frequently offers readings of its own not supported by any other authority or by only a few MSS. of different.-groups; and if some of them appear to be quite as good as the corresponding ones of E., Gg., etc., the majority are decidedly faulty. whilst those of Pa., *Har.*⁵, and *Ash.*² are more or less correct. So *Har.*⁴ cannot be the source of any other MS. of the same group. S. Sp. II, § 16, and its readings in the following ll.: 4, 29, 43, 51, 78, 133, 143, 148, 161, 190—1, 231, 246, 257—8, 265, 276, 336, 382, 423—24; 471. 498, 550, 555, 569, 589, etc. — For its presumed influence on Hod., s. no. 7.

16. Pa. For a full description of this MS., s. Dr. Halfmann's Dissertation¹). Though its text of the 'Pardoner' is nearly complete (only ll. 11 & 12, 17 & 18 are omitted, the same as in *Har.*⁴) it contains so many mistakes and gratuitous alterations that its value is very small. — Its relation to *Har.*⁴ is shown by the readings that both MSS. have in common, besides the two omissions mentioned before (cp. Sp. II, § 11); s. ll. 30, 40, 95, 166, 189, 224, 260, 261, 265, 340, 520, etc. Although some of these readings are shared by single MSS. of other groups, they will contribute towards the evidence that Pa. cannot have been directly derived from *Har.*⁵ or *Ash.*² — But that it cannot have been the source of these or any other MS., is proved by the great number of its mistakes which are not in *Har.*⁴, *Har.*⁵, *Ash.*², and most texts, as already hinted at before (cp.

Spec. II, § 15), e. g. ll. 22, 37, 67, 82, 109, 118, 160, 194, 235, 245, 259, 289—90, 292, 339, 350, 358, 393, 408, 443, 454, 464, 507, 522, 550, 560, 570, 602, 649, etc. — S. also no. 7.

17. *Har.*⁵ is incomplete, part of a leaf, embracing ll. 272—290 and 299—322, being torn, and ending with l. 388. It goes back to the same original from which also

18. *Ash.*² was derived, deviating from the subdivision formed by *Har.*⁴ and Pa., but agreeing with E., Dd., Gg., etc. (Type A. Cp.) Spec. V, § 2, and s. their readings in ll. 5, 6, 10, 11, 17, 18, 30, 40, 89, 95, 166, 202, 235, 249, 256, 337, 342, 427, etc.

Also for the portions missing in *Har.*⁵, *Ash.*² shows the same characteristics as before, viz. it agrees frequently with the A.-Type, where *Har.*⁴ and Pa. have readings of their own or the same as the Co.-, Pe.-, etc. groups. Cp. Sp. V, § 8 and ll. 284, 288, 315, 316, 393, 400, 412, 423, 427, 433, 435, 456, 472, 481, 483, 488, 498, 509, 513, 520, 526, 530, 560, 569, 597, 603, 604, 614, 649 etc. In spite of the numerous similarities between *Har.*⁵ and *Ash.*², neither MS. can be the source of the other; so the former has better authorized readings than the latter in ll. 5, 9, 26, 98, 100, 157, 160, 206, 233, 239, 243, 248, 259, 261, 266, 293, 358, 364, 383, etc. (Cp. Spec., V, 5).

On the other hand, *Har.*⁵ has mistakes where *Ash.*² is correct (Cp. Spec. V, § 6), e. g. in ll. 47, 67, 88, 114, 121, 175, 180, 200, 250, 257, 296, 298, 323, 362, 376, etc.

But their common source cannot have been the original from which *Har.*⁴ and Pa. are descended. Cp. Spec. V, § 4, and the readings of *Har.*⁵ and *Ash.*² occurring in ll. 7, 12, 165, 186, 201, 214, 244, 330, 374, etc. From these it follows that the passages in which *Har.*⁵ and *Ash.*² agree with the E.-Dd.-group cannot have been in the common source of the *Har.*⁴-group (cf. Spec. V, § 11), so that they must have been introduced from a MS. of the A.-Type directly into the lost original of Har.⁵ and Ash.². Though the evidence of these consequently is only second hand, it is sometimes not without interest as supporting some reading or other in the E.-Dd.-group where the different branches of that disagree.

IV. The Se.-group, consisting only of Se. and Hat. — The relation of these two MSS. is shown more by their common agreements, firstly with the lost original of the Te.¹-, Co.-, and Pe.-groups, secondly with the lost source of the last-named group alone, than by peculiar readings of their own (Cp. Spec. II, § 18 and 22). To the former class belong the instances found in ll. 19, 30, 43, 58, 72, 318, 385, 529, 591; to the latter (agreements with the Pe.-gr.), such as the following ones: ll. 160, 177, 178, 179, 180, 242, 280, 325, 328, 344, 372, 422, 456, 457, 494, 530, 600, 617, etc.

19. Se., shortly described in Temp. Pref., p. 7, is a MS. of no great value on account of a good many doubtful and incorrect readings. though several of the mistakes which, according to the foregoing quotations, must have been in its direct source now lost have evidently been corrected from another MS. most likely belonging to the E.-Dd.-group (cp. Spec. II, §§ 20 and 23). Instances in which Hat. has kept the readings of the Te.¹-, Co.-, Pe.-groups, and partly also those of the Har.⁴-group, are: ll. 101, 106, 264, 334, 342, 364, 442, 515, 520, 597, 603, 604, 640, etc.; such where Hat. only agrees with the Pe.-gr., are: ll. 100, 158, 164, 182, 280, 300, 338, 347, 353, 357, 368, 470, 493, 494, 514, 533, 551, 579, 634, etc.

20. Hat. is a not much better representative of their common source than Se., as there are traces of its scribe having made use of one or two other MSS. First we will mention such passages in Hat. as agree with the E.-Dd.-

group, whilst Se. has the reading of the Pe.-gr., etc. (cp. II, § 21 & 24): s. ll. 88, 110, 143, 472, 622 (of). Then there are a number of instances where Hat. has the same readings as Ad.² (s. below no. 24, and cp. Spec. II, § 25), deviating from all others: s. ll. 7, 10, 11, 86, 95, 104, 115, 122, 126, 131, 132, 135, 144, 152; cases in which only few MSS. accidentally join in the same reading with Hat. and Ad.² are: 23, 24, 26, 38, 83, 155, 341, etc. Still another relation must exist between Hat. and Ph.³ (s. also 46 below), though it cannot be decided which of them has consulted the other (cp. Spec. IV, § 35); s. ll. 195, 203, 223, 299, 355, 375, 382, 406, 470, 487, 525, 643, 645, 666, 667. Doubtful it may be whether agreements such as occurring in l. 241 belong to the former or to the latter class. — Cp. also no. 7 (Hod.).

Under these circumstances a few cases in which Se. and Hat. have the same reading as the E.-Dd.-group, but deviate from Pe., etc. (cp. Spec. II, § 20 d and § 26) must be explained as accidental ones, each of the two MSS. having made use of some other besides its direct original; such cases are found in ll. 317 (Lacedomye), 422 (they), 589 (wyne); and 638.

Still less important are agreements between Se., Hat., and a number of MSS. from other groups except Pe., such as those in ll. 7, 32, 254, and 387. So we see that Se. and Hat. have no direct connection with each other, but go back to a lost MS. from which also the original of the Pe.-group was derived.

V. The Tc.¹-group, consisting of Tc.¹, Ra.³, Gl., and Ad.² Cp. Spec. II, §§ 27—31. There are only a few cases in which all four MSS., deviating from all or most others, agree with each other: s. ll. 171, 638 (om. Tc.¹, Ra.³, Gl.², corr. Gl.), 245, 338 (ne), 649. In others, they only (with few accidental exceptions) agree with the Co.-group, which, therefore, must go back to a lost MS. of this class; s. ll. 188, 502, 416, and 817 (I vot); But considering that each of these four MSS. has introduced a number of alterations (as will be shown presently), the following instances may also be reckoned among the passages able to prove this relation, viz. ll. 104, 131, 228, 356, 413, 621, 622. The same allowance must be made to some other readings only shared by part of the Co.-group, the subdivisions of which have been each influenced by some other source; such passages are: ll. 23, 26, 43, 213, 328. 520, 540, and 589.

21. *Tc.¹, though often corrupt, has some readings deviating from the other three, but agreeing with E.-Dd., etc.; such are (cp. II, §§ 20d, 21b, 27b): ll. 68, 79, 89, 104, 356, 425, 476, 507, 509. On the other hand, it has so many mistakes of its own or only shared by few MSS. of other groups, that it cannot have been the source of any other text.; e. g. ll. 5, 51, 85, 86*, 88*, 106*, 133*, 136*, 143*. 262, 284, 298, 303, 304, 306, 330, 341, 342, 372, 378, 398, 400, 411, 435, 436, 448, 458, 467, 468, 473, 489, 497, 502, 506, 515, 516, 521, 527, 549, 550, 558, 569, 572, etc. (Observe the curious agreement of *Tc.*¹ and *Har.⁴ in the ll. marked thus.) At the same time *Tc.*¹ often agrees with

22. *Ra.*³, and

23. Gl., which go back to the same common source. For the agreements of *Tc.*¹, *Ra.*³, and Gl., whilst *Ad.*² has evidently altered its original, s. Spec. II, § 29, where we find the following quotations: — ll. 44, 154, 156. 157, 163, 164, 165, 168, 210, 213, 216, 220, 225, 231, 234, 240, 242, 245, 279, 290, 431, 477, 606, etc.

The near relation of *Ra.*³ and Gl. is proved by a great number of mistakes that they have in common. Besides, the Doctor-Pardoner Link is missing in both (s. no. 52 below), and some single verses are omitted (ll. 521—2, 529—30).

For their other agreements s. Spec. II, § 30; especially ll. 43, 66, 68, 69, 86, 97, 131, 139, 143, 265, 269, 283, 286, 288, 306, 324, 359, 366, 391, 404, 412, 447, 461, 482, 508, 527, 580, 601, 614, 626, 631, 632, 655, 674, etc.

But faulty as Ra.³ and Gl. may be, they have some better authorized readings than Tc.¹ and Ad.², which point to a second source through which the latter have not passed; s. ll. 43 (goth), 322, 346, 372, 403, 467 (as).

On the other hand, Ra.³ and Gl. are independent of each other, which is shown by a good many isolated readings in each of them. Cp. Spec. II, § 31.

Thus Ra.³ has mistakes where Gl. is correct in the following passages: ll. 111, 137, 165, 177, 193, 199, 236, 241, 286, 287, 298, 299, 340, 352, 447, 450, 465, 471, 488, 517, 554, 660, etc.

And also Gl. has mistakes where the readings of Ra.³ are correct; so it omits l. 301; further s. ll. 50, 62, 89, 121, 126, 131, 201, 233, 265, 278, 353, 370, 374, 430, 447, 455, 590, 594, 613, 618, 638, 644, 662, etc.

24. Ad.² is complete, only a couple of ll. (68 and 192) are missing. Its relation to Hat. (s. above, no. 20) makes it impossible that any MS. of this group can have been derived from it. Nor can any MS. now extant have been the direct source of Ad.², as it has a good many faulty readings of its own; e. g. ll. 40, 49, 80, 95 (and grace), 103, 109, 126, 160, 176, 177, 178, 208, 280, 330, 358, 398, 419, 421, 429, 433, 497, 555, 571 (ye schubn), 577, 584, 600, 620, 656, 660, 664.

But those instances in which Ad.² agrees with Tc.¹ alone, or together with few MSS. of other groups, must be considered as original readings of this group either spoilt or corrected in Ra.³ and Gl.; e. g. ll. 131, 139, 318, 329, 338, 366, 372, (with slight variation), 493, 558, 571, 574, 619, 678, etc.

A few agreements of Ad.² with MSS. of other groups (except those with Hat.), whilst deviating from Tc.¹, Ra.³, and Gl. can only be accidental; e. g. ll. 162, 172, 179, 297, 380, 452, 506 etc.

VI. The Co.-group, composed of Co., Lan., Sl.², Tc.², Ne., Har.³, Hel., Ii., Cax.¹, Cax.², and Th. That this group goes back to a MS. belonging to the Tc.¹-group, has been shown before. Agreements proving the close relationship of these MSS. (resp. old prints) are found in their common readings (cp. Specimens III, § 7 and V, § 18) in ll. 11 (except Sl.², for which s. no. 51), 69 (exc. Cax.², Th., s. no. 32), 82 (by), 92 (exc. Th.), 104 (exc. Cax.², Th.), 120 (exc. Th., Cax.²?), 140 (such), 147 (exc. Cax.², Th.), 183, 199^b, 200, 200^b, 204, 498 (exc. Th.), 530, 541 (exc. Th.), 553 (exc. Th.). These eleven texts may be divided into two classes:

a) This subdivision is formed by Co., Lan, and Sl.² (Cp. Spec. III, § 5); s. the readings in ll. 315—6, 380. 478 (agein), 512, 524, 608, 637, 638, etc.

25. Co. S. Temp. Preface pp. 59—60. A handsome MS., clearly written, but often faulty, because its direct source was so. Several leaves are lost, but the 'Pardoner' is pretty well complete; ll. 315—16 are missing, as in Lan. and Sl.², so was l. 178, but is added, conformable to the A-Type etc., in a different hand. Besides, part of a leaf embracing a portion of ll. 31—40 and 46—7, has been cut away. But Co., cannot have been the direct source of Lan. and Sl.², as it has a number of readings deviating partly from these two, partly from all or most other MSS. of this group. S. ll. 1, 76, 82, 84, 100, 126, 138, 141, 156, 238, 325, 333, 375 (for), 407, 425, 450, 451, 452, 512 (py), 518, 620, etc. Of these passages, some more or less distinctly betray the influence of a MS. of Type A., viz. 100, 138, 178 (though written by another hand), 333, 407, 425 (om. of he).

26. Lan. For its peculiarities, s. Temp. Pref., pp. 62—70 (Northern). A whole passage (ll. 121—139) is wanting; besides a single l. (358) has been omitted. That it cannot have been the source of Co. or Sl.², is shown by a good many mistakes of its own, or readings only shared by MSS. not belonging to this group; viz. ll. 4, 16, 32, 95, 162, 176, 192, 250, 257, 266, 268, 290, 296, 310, 323, 338, 372, 378, 398, 444, 472, 478, 507, 508, 514, 529, 533, 544, 547, 578, 592, 633, 637, 652, 656, 658, 679. In a few instances the reading of Lan. approaches that of the A-Type, etc. (ll. 507, 514, 544), but this may be accidental.

27. *Sl.*², complete, only the ll. between 10 and 11 inserted in all other MSS. of the Co.-gr., etc., l. 178 and ll. 315—16 also, at least originally, wanting in all other MSS. of this group are omitted. In the beginning of the 'Pardoner', (ll. 1—11) the original text has been corrected from a MS. of the E.-Dd.-gr. (Cp. Spec. III, § 16), while in the rest scarcely any traces of such influence (perhaps in ll. 168 and 304) are to be discovered. This observation would be sufficient to prove that no other MS. of this group can have been derived directly from *Sl.*². Still, to show the character of this MS., a number of passages may be adduced here showing the negligence of its copyist; e. g. ll. 63, 74, 108, 151, 153, 158, 163, 167, 238, 251, 253, 296, 298, 302, 330, 397, 414, 419, 426, 459, 468, 472, 533, 590, 614, 627, 644, 645, 660, etc.

Though it is evident that none of these MSS. can have been the source to the other, the question naturally arises which of them are the more nearly related to any other. Zupitza declared (Spec. III, § 17) that he could not positively answer such a question, but he believed that there is a closer connection between Co. and *Sl.*². In my opinion, however, his quotations do not bear out this supposition, as he neglects a number of agreements between Co. and Lan. where Sl.² is different, s. ll. 26, 183, 386, 461 (per), 524 (departed been), 572, 598, 669, which can scarcely be all accidental, though the readings which Co. and Sl.² have in common may be a little more numerous; s. ll. 37, 43, 57 (Co. saffran, Sl.² saffren), 72, 76, 139, 146, 188, 192, 324, 372, 415, 447, 453, 456, 458, 563, 637.

But of these only few (ll. 37, 415, 453, 458, 563) can be considered decisive for the mutual relation of Co. and Sl.², whilst, on the other hand, Sl.² in some instances (s. ll. 84, 100, 238, 328, 337, 434) agrees better with Lan. than with Co., not mentioning those passages in which Sl.² and Lan., deviating from Co., have the same readings as the rest or the majority of this group.

So it seems to me that we have to consider those cases in which two of these MSS. join in the same or a similar expression against the third as the original reading of their common source, the deviations from which we must explain as misreadings, or gratuitous alterations of the respective scribe's, sometimes also as a contamination with a MS. belonging to a different group.

b) This subdivision is formed by Tc.², Ne., Cax.¹, Cax.², Th. (which, however, is greatly influenced by another source, s. below), Har.³, Hel., and Ii. Readings proving their mutual relation (cp. Spec. III, § 6), are to be found in ll. 3, 22, 23, 27, 363, 366, 404, 407, 409, 429, 450, 454, 457, 506, 521, 586, etc.

This subdivision splits again into two classes, the first of which we will call a) It is formed by Tc.², Ne., Cax.¹, Cax.², and partly by Th.¹ (Cp. Spec. III, § 7, and V, § 18); s. ll. 43, 44, 45, 48* (also

¹) In passages marked thus*, Th. shares the reading of the other MSS.

Lan.), 60, 72*, 76, 82*, 98*, 117, 118*, 189, 208, 233, 342, 362* (to), 369*, 395, 398*, 424, 451, 468*, 470, 476, 487*, 529, 572*, 578, 584, 638b, etc. To these quotations must be added a few passages in which a (minus Th.) shows the influence of a MS. belonging to the E.-Dd.-group; viz. ll. 483, 591, 638, and 653 (heer may have been omitted by chance in Ne.), 666.

28. *Tc.*² The Doctor-Pardoner Link is wanting; besides, another great portion, embracing ll. 239-340, part of ll. 425-6, and l. 538 are omitted. Consequently, this MS. cannot be the direct source of any other. There is, however, a closer connection between *Tc.*² and the Caxtons, occasionally also between Th. (Cp. Spec. III, § 8), for which s. ll. 180, 374, 507, 514, 560, 653; for the agreements between *Tc.*² and *Cax.*¹ alone, s. ll. 69, 160, and 178. On the other hand, Cax. and Th. are free from the many mistakes occurring in *Tc.*², e. g. in ll. 49, 65, 98 (vp) om.), 101, 120, 156, 174, 182, 186, 190, 197, 212, 439, 445, 446, 456, 580, 589, 648, 661.

29. Ne. A few ll. are missing: 137-145, 178 (originally wanting in the whole group), 305 (the same as in *Har.*³, Hel., and *Cax.*¹), and 630. Though nearly related to *Tc.*², it cannot have been its direct source, as it has several mistakes not to be found in the latter, or in the Caxtons or Th. (Cp. III, § 11); s. ll. 16, 43, 73, 161, 170, 257, 429, 507, 599, 669, 675. That it cannot have been derived from any of these MSS., follows from the quotations in the fore-going section.

30. *Cax.*¹ has only a few misprints or errors not shared by *Tc.*² (cp. Spec. III, § 10; V, § 18); viz. ll. 19, 120, 173, 302, and 610, so that it seems possible that *Cax.*¹ may have been the original from which *Tc.*² was copied, as an intelligent scribe could very well have corrected the mistakes found in *Cax.*¹ But the scribe of *Tc.*² was certainly not intelligent, as he has introduced so many faulty readings enumerated above. So it is more probable that both were reproduced from the same source, but so that Cax.¹ represents a much more faithful copy than Tc.²

31.¹) Cax.² is, on the whole, a revised and corrected edition of Cax.¹, with which, however, it shares a good many mistakes, mostly together with the other MSS. of this subdivision, and only few that do not occur anywhere else, viz. those found in ll. 244 and 360.

For his corrections, however, Caxton evidently made use of a MS. of the A-Type²), in which alterations he is frequently followed by Thynne. In the following enumeration I mark the latter cases by adding a Th. to the number of the line (Cp. Spec. V, § 19—20): ll. 5 (Th.), 6 (Th.), 43 (Th.), 49 (Th.), 63 (Th.), 68 (Th.), 73, 74 (Th.), 89, 100 (to-Th.), 104 (Th.), 106, 124 (Th.), 131 (Th.), 147 (Th.), 157 (Th.), 160 (Th.), 164, 178 (Th.), 184 (Th.), 214 (Th.), 226, 232 (Th.), 262, 264 (Th.), 269—70 (Th.), 281 (Th.), 288, 306, 316 (Th.), 333 (Th.), 338 (Th.), 356 (Th.), 364 (Th.), 365—66, 400, 406, 414 (Th.), 416, 425, 468, 472, 538 (where Cax.² has the best reading of all) 589, 604 (Th.), 640. On the other hand, there are some readings in which Cax.² is either quite isolated, or only supported by few MSS. of different groups, so that these latter coincidences must be considered as accidental (cp. V, § 21); s. ll. 6, 23, 24, 91, 119, 120, 212, 276, 309, 330, 443, 538 (s. above), 662.

¹) In the various readings I use 'Cax.' for brevity's sake when both agree.

²) Cf. on this subject his Preface to this second edition, reprinted by Tyrwhitt, II^d. Ed., p. V, and by Wright, Introduction, p. VII.

32. Th. That this print has many readings in common with the Caxtons and partly with the Co.-group in general, has been shown before. At the same time, however, it frequently agrees with the Pe.-group, among which *Ph.*³ seems to be its nearest relation (cp. Spec. V. § 23). Quitting those instances in which most or all MSS. of this group, when deviating from those of the Co.-group, coincide with the majority of the other classes, especially the following readings are to be adduced to prove its obligation to the Pe.-group: ll. 23, 43 (cf. *Ph.*³), 110, 160, 177, 179, 180, 276, 321 (it, *Ph.*³), 325, 328, 363, 368, 450, 456, 457, 463, 470, 482, 506, 509, 514, 529, 530, 551, 579, 597, 600, 607, 621—22, 624, 634, 638, 654 (*Ph.*³), 663.

To these may be added those cases in which Th. is not only joined by some of the MSS. of the Pe.-group, among which almost regularly *Ph.*³, but sometimes also by MSS. of different groups (cp. Spec. V. § 24); s. ll. 25, 27, 39, 55 (not in *Ph.*³), 74 (not in *Ph.*³), 79 (not in *Ph.*³), 88, 133, 166 (not in *Ph.*³), 192 (not in *Ph.*³), 203, 241, 355, 382, 412, 416, 494 (gōddis precious herte Th., *Ph.*³, Se.), 525, 580 (not in *Ph.*³), 590 (not in *Ph.*³), 643, 645, 648 (not in *Ph.*³).

A number of isolated readings in Th. (cp. Spec. V. § 25; s. ll. 28, 31, 40, 71, 73, 104, 113, 208, 533 etc.) only serve to show that occasional agreements with MSS. of other groups than Co. and Pe. (v. ib. ll. 4, 24, 300, 344 [yet], 453, 459, 560, 584, 626) are to be considered as accidental ones, unless they were derived from the second source of Th., a MS. similar to *Ph.*³, but not *Ph.*³ itself. That *Cax.*² was its other source, is made evident by some curious coincidences found in ll. 30, 217, 604; cp. Spec. V. § 19 B. Which of them, however, Thyme used as the basis of his text, and which for his alterations, cannot be decided with certainty, so that a suggestion to put Th. into the Pe.-group would also be justifiable.

But on the whole it is immaterial whether we reckon this print among one or other class of MSS., so long as we rightly conceive its relations.

β) The second subdivision is formed by Har.³, Hel., and Li., though there are only a few readings that point to a common source (cp. Spec. III, § 12); s. ll. 100, 226, 429, 453, 555 (so, rest of Co.-gr. as), 604 (Than); also the reading in l. 67, though slightly different, may be reckoned here.

33. Har.³ Besides l. 178 om. in most MSS. of this group, only another l., 305, is missing in this MS., the same as in Hel., Ne., and Cax.¹, but it ends the Tale with l. 630. -- It shows some similarity with Hel. (cp. Spec. III, § 13); s. ll. 155, 393, 419, 444, 507, 525; partly also l. 67 quoted above. On the other hand, there are some agreements between Har.³ and MSS. of the other subdivisions of this group pointing, perhaps, to a second source; sometimes these readings are better than those found in b. or β (Cp. Spec. III, § 15), as in ll. 140 (I vse and that is; Ne. and Hel. om. this passage), 173, 265 (semeth), 268, 281; sometimes worse, as in ll. 88, 112, and 235. This second source seems to have been a MS. nearer related to Lan. (s. ll. 43, 76, and 79), though not Lan. itself (s. ll. 140 and 146). But the great number of mistakes in Har.³ make it difficult to describe its relations exactly; the enumeration of a few instances must suffice: s. ll. 79, 90, 120, 137, 157, 189, 241, 246, 272, 295, 296, 313, 324, 328, 332, 337, 348, 373, 377, 407, 425, 473, 506, 509, 515, 539, 556, 597, 601, 602, etc.

34. Hel. has omitted several passages in the introductory and digressive portions of the Tale (s. ll. 73—76, 103—7, 127—34, 259—62, 267—73, 277—8, 283—300, 311—14, 329—32, 355—60) and ends it with l. 606. Its relation to Har.³ has been mentioned before, and it is scarcely worth while to enumerate all its isolated mistakes (a few instances are found in ll. 32, 72, 116, 122, 125, 153, 170, 178, 193, 281, 303, 316, 341, 361, 387, 535, 594, etc.) as the above omissions are sufficient to prove that it cannot be the source of any other MS. of this group. But s. no. 55 Ash.⁴) below.

35. Ii. Besides the omission of several single lines (113, 272, 358, 394, 406, 408, 455—6, 458, 570, 596, 664) this MS. contains so many mistakes of its own (s., e. g., ll. 62, 67, 68, 72, 88, 120, 140, 178, 191, 200^b, 219, 262, 281, 289, 303, 338, 355, 369, 401, 430, 452, 462, 513, 545, 651, 671) that it cannot have been the source of any other MS. Still, there are some passages in which the scribe of Ii. (or the one of his original) has evidently made use of a MS. of a better class, whilst most MSS. of the Co.-group deviate from the common reading (cp. Spec. III, § 14); s. ll. 73—74, 246, 305, 306, 333—4, 356, 508. In l. 68 Ii. resembles most Hat.

Readings which the above 20 MSS. have in common and which deviate from all other groups (the few exceptions are evidently later alterations) are found in ll. 23, 33, 65, 68, 81, 104, 127, 132, 173, 248, 503, 509, 552, 584, 621, 638, 643, etc. (Cp. Spec. IV, § 4—5).

36. Pe. For a short description of this MS., s. Temp. Pref., pp. 60—62 (it must have been written between 1477 and 1489). Though perhaps the best representative of this group, its text apparently not having been influenced by another MS., Pe. cannot have been the direct source of the other MSS. of this class, as it has a number of more or less correct expressions not found in any other text of this group, or occasionally in a few of other classes (cp. Spec. IV, § 7—8); s. ll. 32, 61, 156, 170, 172. 187. 329, 335, 358, 451, 462, 515, 570, 599—600, 608, 648, etc. On the other hand, no other MS. now existing can have been the direct source of Pe., which will be seen from the following discussions.

Some of the other MSS. form undergroups more or less distinctly separated from the rest; thus Ba. and Lin.; Bo.¹ and Ph.²; Har.², Lau.², Ro.¹, Ro.², Lich., and Ash.¹ are more closely related to each other than to the remaining MSS. of this group.

37. Ba. (cp. Spec. IV, § 23 sqq.) has several readings in common with Lin., deviating from all other MSS. of the Pe.-gr., but agreeing with the E.-Dd.-Type; s. ll. 110, 131, 177, 242, 258, 276, 293, 519, 552, 584, 678, etc. Isolated agreements between Ba. and Lin., or such as are not shared by any MS. of the Pe.-group, are found in ll. 49, 67, 328, 357, 595, 665; similar also are the readings of the two in l. 268. But on the other hand, either MS. has a few expressions in common with the E.-Dd.-group, whilst the other follows the reading of Pe., etc.; for Ba., s. ll. 25, 100, 156, 403, perhaps also l. 342; for Lin. s. ll. 78, 150, 222, 279, 326, 347, 382, 441, 482, 486, 571, 617. — To these may be added those instances in which Lin., agreeing with the A-Type, is joined by a few other MSS. of the Pe.-group, e. g. 89, 105 (herd), 112, 195, 380 (forby), 398, 497, 548, 580 (ghent), 661, 667, 675, etc. — Besides, Lin. has a few corrections by a later hand in ll. 68, 178, 353, 372. From these quotations it follows that Lin. and Ba. go back to the same original, but that each has also made use of another MS. of a different group.

But that Ba. cannot be the direct source of Lin., nor any other MS. now extant is shown by several mistakes occurring in it alone; s. ll. 192, 209, 224, 234, 238, 264, 276, 315, 347, 526, 537, 547, 581, 582, 610, 627, 637, etc.

38. *Bo.*¹ has frequently the same readings as *Ph.*² (cp. Spec. IV, § 18 sqq.); we will first quote instances in which these two, deviating from the original readings of the Pe.-group, agree with MSS. similar to E.-Dd., etc.; s. ll. 126, 207, 263, 386, 407, 589, and, joined by some other texts of the Pe.-group, in ll. 79 (a om.), 89, 219, 299, 624, etc. But more frequent are the cases in which *Bo.*¹ and *Ph.*² have the same mistakes from which all other MSS. are free; s. ll. 22, 37, 73, 81, 85, 105, 112, 156, 233, 243, 256, 281, 289, 320, 347, 360, 430, 433, 470, 592, 659, 672, etc.

*Bo.*¹, however, is not the source of *Ph.*²; s. its errors in ll. 34, 61, 101, 143, 183, 210, 250, 374, 379, 414, 419, 522, 572, 581, 629, 634, 676, where *Ph.*² is correct or follows the reading of the other MSS. of the Pe.-group. Cf. below no. 46.

39. Del., a MS. which distinguishes itself from all others by frequent insertion of superfluous words or other gratuitous alterations. Cp. Spec. IV, §§ 29—31. Still there are some readings in which Del. agrees with the MSS. of the A-Type, partly alone of its group, partly together with one or more MSS. of the same. Such of the former kind are found in ll. 323 (woleI), 354, 457, 528; such of the last-named description are in ll. 64, 105 (herd), 112, 145, 321 (hit), 324, 342, 522, 598. So it appears that Del. or its direct source must have occasionally introduced corrections from a MS. of the E.-Dd.-Type. But the majority of its deviations from the Pe.-group, as well as from the others, show that Del. itself cannot have been the original of any other

MS.; s. ll. 58, 68, 84, 99, 106, 116, 120, 156, 167, 188, 195, 207, 212, 239, 240, 256, 263, 279, 295, 314, 333, 400, 401, 403, 416, 427, 428, 435, 443, 447, 466, 480, 483, 486, 487, 492, 506, 507, 511, 518, 521, 525, 526, 527, 552, 566, 580, 582, 588, 594, 597, 615, 622, 633, 636, 642, 669, etc.

40. *Har.*² apparently goes back to a common source with *Lau.*², Lich., *Ro.*¹, *Ro.*², and *Ash.*¹ (cp. Spec. IV, § 10; V, § 12), all having the same readings in ll. 3—10 (11*—12*) as the *Har.*⁴ and Co.-groups in the beginning of the Pardoner's Preamble. Though in the remaining portion of the poem there is only one more instance (l. 239) in which five of them, deviating from all other MSS. of the Pe.-group and most of the others, have the same expression (the sixth, *Ro.*¹, being more than once influenced by a MS. of the Dd.-group; s. no. 49), the above agreement can scarcely be explained otherwise than by the supposition that all six were derived from a MS. in which the originally missing ll. 3 sqq. were copied from a text belonging either to the Co.- or *Har.*⁴-group.

The frequent deviations from each other in the rest of the 'Pardoner' then must have originated from contaminations with MSS. of other groups, of which more or less distinct traces are still visible.

Among these six MSS., *Har.*², Lich., and *Ash.*¹ form a sort of subgroup, though there are not many undoubted readings to show this (cp. Spec. IV, § 14. V, § 13 B.); s. especially ll. 164 and 353. But several other agreements where these three are joined by a few MSS. of the Pe.-group can be adduced for this purpose, particularly those in which a MS. of the E.-Dd. class has evidently been made use of by the different scribes; s. ll. 63, 64, 231, etc. Other similarities are found in ll. 48, 254, 532, 598, 650, and perhaps also in l. 581 (put). The same curious mistakes in Har.² and Ash¹ occur in ll. 392 & 569, whilst Lich. has corrected these readings. On the whole, however, Lich. and Ash.¹ are much more nearly related; cf. below 43.

But that Har.² cannot be their direct source, is shown by a number of readings in which Har.² deviates from them and, at the same time, from all or most MSS. of the Pe.-group, partly also from every other text (s. Spec. IV, § 15). A decided improvement in Har.² is found in l. 365; but faulty are its readings in ll. 201, 388, 601; further s. ll. 162, 193, 261, 375, 507, etc., where its mistakes are shared by other MSS. of the Pe.-gr.

41. *Lau.*¹ has not the Doctor-Pardoner Link (cf. no. 52 below) and omits the first five lines of the Prologue, beginning thus with l. 45 (cp. Spec. IV. § 32—33). That its scribe must have consulted, directly or indirectly, a MS. of a better class, is made evident by its readings in ll. 70, 126, 173, 189 (pen), 306, 422 (if that). Though *Lau.*¹ here agrees with a MS. or two of the Pe.-gr., the influence of a special MS. cannot be distinctly traced, as *Lau.*¹ coincides now with one of them, now with the other. Besides, *Lau.*¹ contains several mistakes in common with a few MSS. of the same group (s. ll. 197, 230, 283, 331, 346, 376, 394, 406, 507, 535, 578, 645, 664, etc.); but these agreements are so changing that it is impossible to prove a closer relation between *Lau.*¹ and any of them. On the other hand, it is obvious from the omission mentioned above and from a number of isolated readings (s. ll. 104, 142, 179, 256, 259, 366, 388, 422, 457, 520, 559, 657), that *Lau.*¹ cannot be the source of any other MS.

42. *Lau.*² belongs, as we have seen before, to the same subdivision with Har.², Lich., Ro.¹, Ro.², and Ash.¹ Its nearest relation is Ro.², with which it has several readings in common pointing to a source from which both were derived (cp. Spec. IV, §§ 11—13). Decisive instances are found in ll. 124, 241, 252, 332, 376, and 434; not quite so sure, but still worth mentioning are some agreements between Lau.² and Ro.² in which they are met by a few other MSS. of the same group; viz. those in ll. 22 (glyke), 103, 109, 123, 163, 331, 345, 534, etc. But Lau.² cannot be the original from which Ro.² was derived, as we see from its numerous mistakes not occurring in any other MS.; such are contained in ll. 19, 22 (marie), 23, 34, 60, 81, 83, 112, 120, 133, 164, 215, 231, 238, 278 (Phy.), 282, 289, 303 (No.), 330, 347, 368, 399, 445, 504, 521, 550, 591, 605, 631, 662, etc. — On the other hand, there are a few instances where the scribe of Lau.² seems to have consulted a better MS.; s. ll. 173, 195, 202, 497, 604, and cp. below, 49.

43. Lich. The connection of this MS. with Har.² and others has been shown before (no. 40), where also its nearer relation to Ash.¹ was pointed at. This is proved by several agreements (cp. Spec. V, § 12): both omit entirely ll. 6, 11, 12, and (orig. also Ash.¹) 570, and have in common a number of readings which deviate either from all other MSS. (s. ll. 68, 122, 170, 181, 201, 248, 327, 365, 381, 544, 578, 589, 631, 658), or are only to be found in a few MSS. of different groups (s. ll. 38, 76, 98, 114, 134, 137, 180, 333, 361, 376, 392, 453, 456, 571, 626, 665). There are a few instances where Lich. and Ash.¹ are more correct than the majority of Pe.-MSS. (s. ll. 363, 414, 415 [ech], 442, 458), so that the occasional use of a MS. of the A-Type by these two appears probable. Less likely does it seem to me that another MS. of the Pe.-group (besides those mentioned in no. 49) should have influenced Lich. and Ash.¹, as the agreements with one or the other of this class do not point in any certain direction (cp. Spec. V, § 13; s. ll. 15, 18, 32, 69, 128, 151, 189, 192, 195, 280, 323, 344, 454, 529, 613.)

But Lich. cannot be the original of Ash.¹ (cp. Spec. V, § 14 B), as this one is correct or nearly so in several passages where the former is spoiled; s. ll. 85, 89, 148, 192 (by), 207, 297, 301, 372, 411, 428, 501, 502, 630.

44. Lin. Its connection with Ba. having been treated of before (s. above 36), we have only to show that neither Ba. nor any other MS. can have been copied from Lin., which has a good many mistakes where all other MSS. of the Pe.-group are correct or, at least, most of them, have the same deviation from the better MSS. (cp. Spec. IV, § 25); s. ll. 66, 67, 97, 101, 104, 109, 145, 163, 177, 179, 198, 201, 227, 233, 341, 447, 450, 505, 528, 542, 550, 588, 596, 638, 662. Among these, there are a few more or less striking coincidences with No. (s. ll. 109, 179, 528, 588), to which might be added those in ll. 124, 283, and 560. But as No. often enough quits the readings of the E.-Dd.-group (s. e. g. ll. 195, 380, 398, 497, 580, etc.) where Lin. follows them, No. cannot have had any direct influence on Lin. Perhaps, however, the latter may have derived its alterations from a lost MS. of the Dd.-group to which also No. goes back.

45. Mm. shows some similarities with Sl.¹ (cp. Spec. IV, §§ 20—22); the most striking is the omission in both of ll. 585—90. Besides this agreement, there is only one more occurring in no other MS.; s. l. 85. In the other instances where Mm. and Sl.¹ have the same peculiar reading they are always joined by several other texts of the Pe.-group; s. ll. 6, 22, 150 (Swiche). 156, 255, 259, 323, 354, 515, 653, etc.

On the other hand, each has a great number of mistakes from which the other is free, so that neither can be the source of the other. Such readings in Mm. are found in ll. 8, 16, 27, 32, 128, 185, 197, 238, 269, 280, 285, 307, 318, 334, 366, 416, 424, 435, 453, 486, 489, 503, 532, 534, 541, 555, 557, 560, 568, 626, 643, 666, etc. In a few passages the scribe of Mm. seems to have consulted a better MS.; s. ll. 10, 508, 604, and perhaps also 489. — For the particular readings of Sl.¹, s. below (no 51). — Considering all these divergences, it must become doubtful whether a connection, as indicated above, between Mm. and Sl.¹ really existed. And, indeed, on closer examination of the gap in both we shall find that the omission occurs between two lines running exactly alike in the Pe.-gr., a not uncommon error with negligent scribes. So, in all probability, Mm. and Sl.¹ are independent of each other. Nor are the occasional agreements between Mm. and other MSS. appearing in the foregoing quotations such as to make the supposition of a nearer connection between them necessary.

46. *Ph.*² The close relation between this MS. and Bo.¹ has already been proved (s. 38). It now remains to show that *Ph.*² cannot have been the source of Bo.¹ (cp. Spec. IV, § 19 B), as it has a number of readings not found in any other MS. of the Pe.-group and only occasionally in any of another type; s. ll. 105, 137, 142, 178, 180, 191, 274, 523, 525, 603, 604, 614, etc., whilst there are traces of the influence of some better MS., not found in Bo.¹, in ll. 79, 315, 663, and 675.

47. *Ph.*³ Having shown the connection of this MS. with Hat. before (s. above, 20), we have yet to state its relation to the other MSS. of the Pe.-group. It will easily be understood that *Ph.*³ cannot have been the original of any other text, when we consider the great number of gratuitous alterations and other negligences found, e. g., in ll. 8, 11, 14, 32, 37, 39, 55, 66, 71, 77, 104, 115, 124, 128, 131, 132, 147, 155, 167, 169, 172, 185, 219, 242, 268, 271, 324, 344, 353, 358, 377, 383, 409, 418, 420, 425, 428, 433, 523, 577, 585, 601, 655, 658, etc.

As for the closer agreement of Ph.³ with other MSS. of the Pe.-group, there are no instances decisive enough to make the derivation of one of them from the same direct source as Ph.³ likely. (Cp. Spec. IV, § 36.)

48. *Ra.*², a MS. of a similar character as the foregoing one. That it cannot have been the original of any other extant now, is shown by a number of mistakes not found anywhere else (cp. Spec. IV, §§ 37—38); s., e. g., ll. 22, 41, 64, 78, 83, 84, 98, 104, 123, 132, 134, 168, 173, 183, 229, 231, 240, 306, 309, 407, 422, 457, 536, 548, 613, 643, 653, 655, 661, 665, 667, etc. Some curious readings that *Ra.*² has in common with MSS. of other groups (s. ll. 26, 79, 149, 157, 208, 234, 260, 333, 409, 429, 440, 465, 550 [he], 644, 654, 662) are not apt to prove a nearer relation between them, as it is now with one, now with another MS. of a different class that *Ra.*² agrees. The same is to be said of some similarities between *Ra.*² and a few other MSS. of the Pe.-group (s. ll. 5 [Iustices], 11, 121, 122, 360, 543, 590, 609, 629) which are, in each case, not numerous enough to mark a closer connection.

49. *Ro.*¹ Its relation to *Har.*², *Lau.*², Lich., *Ro.*², and *Ash.*¹ has been mentioned before (40). But its scribe must have also made use of a MS. of the Dd.-group, which is made evident by the insertion of the same spurious line after l. 58., and supported by several other readings (cp. Spec. IV, § 17); s. ll. 43, 124, 251, 304, 375 (forto), 380, 388, 421, 423, 442, 448, 452 (to), 494, 503, 554, 580 (I hent), etc. In some of these instances the same reading is also shared by other MSS. of the Pe.-group, but they are such as have been proved before to have consulted some MS. of the same type (as *Bo.*¹, *Ph.*², Lin., etc.) It is even possible that *Ro.*¹ has been influenced by another MS., similar to *Bo.*¹, *Ph.*² (s. especially ll. 477 and 543), but this cannot be clearly stated.

On the other hand, Ro.¹ has a number of mistakes not occurring in any other MSS.; s. ll. 37, 78, 124, 168, 169, 173, 223, 239, 249, 267, 382, 387, 390, 432, 605, 628; others again which are only found in a few MSS. not belonging to the Pe.-gr.; s. ll. 19, 128, 200, 348, 419, 537, 560, 608, etc. But these latter agreements not being of much consequence can only serve to show that no other MS. goes back to Ro.¹ as its direct source.

50. Ro.² We have seen before that there is a closer connection between this MS. and Lau.² (s. above, 42), but that the last-named one cannot be considered as its original. We have now only to answer the question whether Ro.² can be the original of Lau.² This, indeed, appears possible, as there are in Ro.², only a few mistakes or deviations from the common original of the Pe.-group, where Lau.² follows the latter more closely (cp. Spec. IV, § 13 and s. ll. 76, 95, 394, 535, 592, 596, 665). Besides, these readings in Ro.² are such as an intelligent copyist might have corrected without the assistance of another MS., and if the scribe of Lau.² does not present himself as quite reliable, we must bear in mind that there are a few passages in this latter text betraying more or less distinctly the influence of a MS. of the A-type, so that the scribe of Lau.² may have corrected the mistakes in Ro.² according to this supposed second source.

51. Sl.¹ As shown before (45), there is an apparent connection of this MS. with Mm., which supposition, however, on nearer examination turned out not to be sufficiently founded. We have also seen that, at any rate, Mm. could not be the source of Sl.¹; it now remains to prove that Sl.¹ cannot be the source of Mm. either. For this purpose (cp. Spec. IV, § 21 B), we will refer to the readings occurring in ll. 30, 82, 277, 280, 309, 331 (nay), 362, 405, 411, 444, 562, 592, which are not to be found in any other MS., and to those in ll. 3, 37, 97, 208, 257, 261, 331, 335, 376, 378, 394, 507. which are also shared by MSS. of the same or different groups. But as these latter agreements can easily be explained as common clerical errors, we must conclude that there is no nearer relation between Sl.¹ and any other MSS.

52. To. omits the Doctor-Pardoner Link, thus beginning with l. 41; besides, some single ll. are wanting: 116, 218—20, 358, 430. (Cp. Spec. IV, §§ 39—43).

The first question to be discussed is whether To. can have been the source of some other MS. of the Pe.-group. Considering the great number of mistakes or isolated readings found in ll. 42, 56, 60, 66, 79, 80, 81, 119, 136, 166, 172, 181, 188, 238, 245, 248, 273, 305, 309, 312, 348, 377, 378, 396, 421, 429, 440, 472, 481, 484, 491, 504, 522, 572, 573, 580, 592, 604, 624, 630, 645, 649, 659, 666, 667, etc., this question must be answered in the negative. But the great negligence of the scribe betrayed by these frequent omissions and gratuitous alterations shows how careful we must be in judging upon apparent relations of To. to other MSS. So a few readings which To. has in common with some MSS. of the Pe.-group, deviating from the majority, must not be regarded as proofs of a nearer connection with them (s. ll. 48 (showe D), 97, 163, 164, 171, 200, 303, 306, 382, 394, and cp. IV, § 43), especially as these agreements do not always appear in one and the same MS.

The next question is whether To. is related to any MS. of another group.

Following the trace indicated by the omission of the Doctor-Pardoner Link, we shall see that the Link is also absent in No., Ra.³, Gl., and Tc.² (not mentioning here those MSS. in which the beginning has been lost by some accident independent of the scribe's intentions). If we now compare To. and No. (s. above no. 8) with each other, we shall indeed discover some agreements, while most or all readings of the Pe.-group differ; such instances are found in ll. 160, 283, 290, 342 (trete), 385, 388, 453, 520, 560, 591, 624, 642, 656. But only a few of these passages (283, 385, 591, 642) can be considered as decisive for an influence of the Dd.-group, to which No. belongs, as in most of them other MSS. of the Pe.-group also agree with the reading in question. On the other hand, it is evident that No. itself cannot have been the MS. of which the scribe of To. made use for these corrections, as there are a few coincidences in the latter with MSS. of the E.-Dd.-group where No. deviates; s. ll. 98, 100, 435, 457, 468.

Turning now to an examination of Ra.³ and Gl. (s. 22 & 23), we shall also find that there are a few readings agreeing with To., whilst the rest of the Pe.-group differ more or less; s. especially ll. 328 (to you), 540, 598, 606, 621 (similarly 622). Less decisive are the agreements in ll. 48, 128, 502, 532, 568, 572, 634, etc., as here To. is joined by other MSS. of the Pe.-group. In other cases, it must remain doubtful whether the coincidence of To. with a text of another class is to be retraced to a MS. of the Dd.- or of the Tc.¹-group, to which Ra.³ and Gl. belong; s. e. g. ll. 50, 107, 344, 369, 568, 572 (also), etc.

A connection between Tc.² (s. 28) and To. is still less likely; for, besides the omission of the Link, there is only one agreement (l. 424) pointing in this direction; which — even though supported by some minor ones (s. ll. 185 & 427) — can scarcely be considered as sufficient to prove a relation between these two MSS.

The conclusion to be drawn from these comparisons is that, though some of the above agreements may be accidental, To. has probably been influenced by one or two MSS. of some other class than the one to which it on the whole belongs, which MSS., however, are no longer extant. But whether the omission of the Link is also to be ascribed to this influence, or whether the copyist of To. left it out on his own account, cannot be decided. (Cp. also IV, § 41).

53. Chn. is the most incomplete MS. of this group containing only ll. 229—304 and 383—680, but, so far as it goes, belongs to the better sort (Cp. Spec. IV, § 44—46). It has only a few isolated readings (s. ll. 248, 274, 619; less decisive 429), which, together with the gaps just mentioned, suffice however to show that Ch. cannot have been the direct source to any other MS.

But Chn. cannot either have been derived directly from another MS. of the Pe.-group now extant, as it has several good readings either alone (s. l. 497 [to—ento]), or accompanied only by few other texts of this class which, as shown before, have been more or less influenced by MSS. of other groups; s. ll. 414, 522, 530, 555, 572 (also), 621, 661, 665 (or of), 680. More doubtful instances are those in ll. 255, 285, 287, 422, and 653, where the correct reading is also found in a greater number of MSS. of the Pe.-type. Now, as these corrections appear sometimes in one MS., sometimes in another, they cannot go back to one and the same source from which Chn. might have taken them. So the scribe of Chn. must have either made use of several other MSS. of its group, or he must have derived these better readings from a certain MS. of a better class, which seems more likely.

As for those instances, described as doubtful, the question might be raised whether the better readings in some of the MSS. in this group may not all go back to one common source now lost in which a number of mistakes appearing in Pe., etc. had already been corrected; or, on the other hand, whether the common mistakes in a certain number of MSS. of this group may not be retraced to one and the same original. But considering that there is not one MS.

which, by the side of some of those corrections, does not contain some of the mistakes characteristic of this group, the supposition that each MS. or each undergroup introduced its alteration independently of the others, is more probable.

54. *Ash.*¹ The near relation of this MS. to Lich. has been proved before (s. above, 43). It now remains only to state that *Ash.*¹ cannot have been the direct source of Lich. (cp. Spec. V, § 14); s. the readings occurring in ll. 9, 22, 62, 72, 80, 100, 104, 136, 160, 203, 276, 324, 334, 392, 429, 456, 502, 545, 601, 652, etc. So both must go back to a common source which is now lost. — A fragment, *Ash.*¹ a, comprising ll. 136—73, written on the Extra End-leaf of the same MS., belongs to the same class of MSS. (cp. Spec. V, § 14 C.), quite agreeing with Lich., even where *Ash.*¹ deviates from it; only in the last l. this fragment has wont.

54. *Ash.*¹ The most striking feature of this MS. is its many omissions and contractions (Cp. Spec. V, § 15—17); such are found ll. 21—23, 24 & 25 contr., 35, 36 & 37 contr., 78—84, 127—31, 135, 136—37 contr., 141—48, 158—59, 173—74, 225—45, 246 & 247 contr., 253—62, 265—85, next ones contr., 291—300, 311—14, 353—56, 358—60, 357 & 361 contr., 396, 411—16, 469, 470 & 471 contr., 518—22, 533—34, 601—4, 639—55, 659—62, etc. The poem ends after l. 676 with, two spurious lines. Except a few instances (ll. 411 sqq. and 518 sqq.), perhaps, where the omissions seem due to an oversight of the scribe's, these passages have evidently been left out with a purpose, as the copyist has repeatedly tried to join the portions separated by his excisions by altering some words at the beginning or at the end of these gaps, in order to make his text appear complete. On closer examination we shall find that the lines thus cut out mostly contain descriptions or moral contemplations not essential for the context.

Sometimes they may have been omitted on account of their rather indecent contents (e. g. ll. 655 sqq.), so that the poem seems to have been curtailed in usum delphini.

Though it follows from the foregoing quotations that Ash.⁴ cannot have been the direct source of any other MS. of the Pe.-group, there seems to exist a certain relation with Hel. (s. above, 34), which also omits certain passages, some of them coinciding more or less with those in Ash.⁴ But, there is else no reading that these two MSS. have in common but is also shared by a number of other texts; and even the one in l. 180, where both have eten and drinkyn, omitting also, is likewise found in another (Tc.²), and similarly in Se. On the other hand, Ash.⁴ has a number of mistakes from which not only Hel., but all other MSS. are free: s. ll. 12, 29, 60, 63, 70, 95, 149, 154, 178, 181, 199, 209, 215, 220, 305, 339, 344, 365, 369, 432, 438, 464, 513, 536, 544, 549, 550, 583, 592, 593, 594, 615, 617, 625, etc. In a few cases, however, Ash.⁴ agrees with E. (s. ll. 535, 555 [shal], 585), where Hel. and all or nearly all MSS. of the Pe.-group deviate, so that its scribe (or the one of his direct source) has evidently made occasional use of this MS. or one related to it; and so the reading in l. 180 mentioned before can perhaps be accounted for by supposing that the words and drynk not found in the Pe.-group were taken from the same original.

The result, then, is that, if the omission of the same or similar passages in Hel. and Ash.⁴ cannot be explained as merely accidental, we must assume that either the scribe of the former, or the one of the latter consulted the other MS. in order to find indications which passages in the 'Pardoner' might be best suppressed for his purpose.

Looking back on the foregoing researches, I hope I have shown that the A-Type is, though not faultless, the best basis for the construction of a critical edition of the Canterbury Tales, at least for the Pardoner's Prologue and Tale, and that deviations in the B-Type are, with a few exceptions perhaps, either corruptions of the original, or at best, attempts at correcting an already faulty common source. That this was the prevailing conviction as early as the fifteenth century, must be concluded from the fact that a great number of the MSS. of the B-Type (Har.⁵, Ash.², Se., Hat., Sl.², Ba., Lin., Bo.¹, Ph.², etc.) have consulted such of the A-Type, and especially valuable in this respect is Caxton's confession in the Preface to his second Edition (s. p. LII, note). The reverse is very rarely the case (as in the Hod. MS.); and if there are evidently some contaminations between MSS. of the different groups of the B-Type (e. g. between Hat. and Ph.³, or, partly, between Th. and Pe.), such form the exceptions.

Though the preference given to the A-Type, and especially to the Ellesmere MS., seems to be generally acknowledged by modern editors, doubts have been raised¹⁾ whether E., correct as it may be in its way, can be considered as a true representative of Chaucer's original. On the contrary, it has been suggested that traces of the poet's first cast are still found in some MSS. corrupt indeed, but otherwise valuable (No., Ra.³, Gl., Lau.¹, and To), in which the Doctor-Pardoner Link is missing. Besides, they are said to have in common a number of readings spread through different groups, but altered by the so called 'edited texts'.

¹⁾ As by Prof. Mc. Cormick in a book not issued yet, to my knowledge, but of which he has kindly sent me some proofsheets.

As I have tried to explain these latter agreements partly as accidental or insignificant, partly by contamination (s. above, no 52), I will only add a few more reasons why I must reject these objections against Prof. Zupitza's genealogy and my own.

1) The absence of the Doctor-Pardoner Link in a few obscure MSS. does not prove that this one was a later addition made by Chaucer, for the first verse of the Prologue (l. 41) would remain quite unintelligible without this Link.

2) It is evident that the C. T. were not published till after the poet's death, as all complete MSS., of the A-Type as well as of the B-Type, so far as we know, contain the 'Retraction' towards the end of the Parson's Tale, which, as already Tyrwhitt suggested, is no doubt an interpolation made by some monk or priest, before he would allow this work to be promulgated.¹⁾ So it is not likely that portions of it had been issued before, except perhaps to a few intimate friends (s. Chaucer's Envoy to Scogan, l. 29; Skeat's Ed. I, p. 399). Nor can the existence of a MS. containing only the Clerk's Tale (the Naples MS., dated 1457) prove that this part was copied before the whole of the C. T., incomplete as they were left, was issued.

3) I believe that even in the first cast of his poems, should such a one ever turn up, Chaucer would never have written such deficient lines as are most of those in the five MSS. mentioned above, which have been pointed out as showing their common origin from such a sketch. For a poet of such astonishing faculties would never put down metrically imperfect verses or impossible rymes, though he might, in his later revision, introduce some more appropriate expression, or add or suppress a few lines here and there.

4) The most perfect form of his poem is always due to the poetical genius himself; it is impossible to think that the better readings found in E. should be the work of a pupil or a scribe. For there is not one among Chaucer's admirers and followers who could have handled language and versification so correctly as his master would have done, and certainly no one would have been able to correct all the shortcomings found in the B-Type or any particular MS. so consistently and cleverly throughout as we see them done in E. and its relations, should we ever suppose that those imperfections had come from our poet's pen.

According to these considerations I have not the least doubt that the Ellesmere MS., as on the whole the least faulty, must form the basis of a critical text of the C. T.

Notes.

Ll. 1—12 refer to the immediately preceding Tale of the 'Doctour of Phisik' relating the death of Virginia according to the Roman de la Rose (ll. 5613—82), which is based upon Livy, lib. III. Cf. Introduction, ch. III.

L. 1 (287) Oure Hooste: the jolly landlord of the 'Tabard', where the pilgrims assembled before starting on their journey to Canterbury. In the General Prologue, ll. 751 sqq., he is described as follows: —

*A large man he was, with eyen stepe [bright],
A fairer Burgeys was ther noon in Chepe;
Boold of his speche, and wys, and well ytaught,
And of manhod hym lakkede right naught;
Eek therto he was right a myrie man, etc.*

He is, in fact, the leader of the whole pilgrimage, arranges the order of the single tales, and comments upon every one, serving as a sort of chorus. Thus he expresses here his horror of the cruel death of the innocent Roman girl. His speech is often very rude, but never devoid of good sense and broad humour. S. ll. 658 sqq. below. — In Hooste the final e (cf. Fr. hôte) must be added, which is etymologically correct, on account of the metre (cf. note to l. 653); or, if considered as mute here, the reading of Har.⁺, etc., must be adopted, according to which the prep. to before swere is omitted, as frequently in Chaucer, after ginne (s. ll. 378 and 432 below). Then, however, sweren must receive its final n (before a vowel) and the final e in were is to be pronounced. But there is no necessity for this alteration. — gan to swere: ginne(n) is frequently almost meaningless, as is 'do' in Modern Engl., especially in poets like Shakspeare, and merely used as an expletive for the verse. — as = as if; so often, e. g. Gen. Prol. 81, 199, etc.; cp. Mod. Engl. 'as it were'. — wood: mad.

L. 2 (288) Harrow: interj. denoting alarm, a cry for help (Morris); a cry of astonishment (Sk.); help! (ib. Gloss.). I should render it here with 'halloo'. — nayles: cf. note to l. 363 below.

L. 3 (289) cherl: refers to 'Claudius' in the Doctor's Tale (s. ll. 140, 142, 153, 191, 199); 'Iustise' is Appius, the judge. As two different persons are meant, and must not be omitted, as it is in several texts. Some MSS. have clerk for cherl, also in the Doctor's T. (cp. Sk.); but that the latter is the correct reading, is shown by a comparison with the French text (s. above), which has 'li ribaus' in this place (l. 5623). — Cp. note to l. 429.

L. 4 (290) deuyse: to suggest, imagine, describe, explain, relate (s. l. 135).

L. 5 (291) Come (short $\ddot{v}=\ddot{u}$): may come; pres. sing. subj. — thise: such.; cf. also note to l. 250. — false in E. and a few other MSS. must have crept in by mistake, perhaps from l. 3; at any rate, it is to be deleted on account of the metre. — aduocas: though found only in a few MSS. (In., Ad.¹; Har.⁵, Ash.²; Th.; Pe., Bo.¹, Ph.², Ra.²), this spelling recommends itself because of the ryme; cf. ten Brink, § 329. — That the reading of Har.⁴, &c., adopted by Wright (Wr.), Bell (B.), and Morris (M.) must be considered as spurious is shown by the word his before body and bones, referring here (s. l. 3) to two different personages (cp. Skeat's note).

L. 6 (292) Algate: adv. = at any rate; alg. — allas: unfortunately! — sely: good, innocent, poor. — The deviation from this line found in the same MSS. as in l. 5 is, at least, very suspicious; for bikenne (= to commit) seems not to occur in any other place in Chaucer, and betake (to commend) which is met with in other MSS., always takes to before its second object, s. C. T., A 3750 (Miller's T.), G. 541 (Second Nun's T.), I 1043 (Person's T.), Boethius II, pros. 1, etc. Accordingly, Caxtons's first print has To the deuyl, etc. Einkenel, Streifzüge durch die mengl. Syntax, etc., p. 106, quotes this line as the only case where the prep. to is dropped, when the dative of a substantive appears at the head of a clause. So these two verses are evidently a scribe's make-up for a gap or the indistinct writing in his direct source. Cp. ll. 10*, 11*, 67/68.

L. 7 (293) she boughte, &c.: she paid too dear a price for her beauty, i. e. she lost her life for it. — hir, inserted in a great number of MSS. before beautee seems only a scribe's make-up for the final e of boughte, which became mute in the 15th century.

L. 8 (294) alday: continually, always. — as, though only found in E. and another MS. of the A-type, seems to me to make the best sense here. On the other hand, it is curious that all other MSS. agree in writing that, which is also admissible, though its repetition in l. 9. sounds rather awkward (cp. however, l. 151, n.). Still, I think that there is no necessity to alter the reading of E. — mow(e) would be the correct plural of may; but as only few MSS. have it here, it is doubtful whether it was also in the original, especially as only may is found in Chaucer's ryme. Cp. ll. 37, 290, 339, 360, 422, 644.

L. 9 (295). Skeat is wrong, in my opinion, in adopting or, the reading of Har.⁴, &c., instead of and; for the poet evidently wishes to express the idea that the gifts of Fortune as well as those of Nature often bring ruin upon a man, because he speaks of them again in l. 11 as of bothe yiftes.

L. 10 (296). Pronounce many^ā, i. e. y has here the sound of the English y as consonant or of the German j, which is generally the case before an unaccented vowel; cp. ten Brink, § 269, Kittredge, § 131, and see below ll. 119, 242, 356, etc.; The final y or ie after r (l) of other words is also frequently slurred in the same way; s. ll. 123, 134, 196, 246, 442, 609, 675; cf. ten Brink, § 284; Kittredge, l. c. — After this line several MSS. (Har.⁴, Pa.; Co.-gr., exc. Sl.²; Har.², Lau.², Lich., Ro.¹, Ro.², Ash.¹; Hod. [but pat f. as]; Har.⁵ and Ash.² have them between ll. 12 and 13) insert two others: —

10* hir beautee was hir dep I dar wel sayn

11* Allas pitously as sche¹) was slayn,

which are also admitted by all modern Edd. (except Tyrwhitt). But that their genuineness is very doubtful, is firstly shown by their appearing only in those MSS. which also contain the spurious verses for ll. 5—6 mentioned before. Besides, they express no new idea; the first of them only repeats l. 7, the second, l. 6 as it runs according to the majority of MSS. In Har.⁴, etc., however, the latter is supplied by another verse, so that for this type of MSS. only the second inserted line has some raison d'être. Finally the order of thoughts is entirely disturbed by these two lines, so that the scribe of the common original of the Har.⁴-group saw himself obliged to omit the next two lines (in Har.⁵ and Ash.² they were evidently introduced later, and in the wrong place), whilst the copyist of the common source of the Co.-gr. was compelled to insert a very trivial verse for l. 11, in order to connect it with l. 12. Nor are the other groups belonging to the same type of MSS. (Tc.¹, Pe., etc.) here quite in order: a hint that the first twelve lines were wanting in their common original, and were added later by each branch in a different way.

L. 12 (300) for, omitted by all the MSS. of the afore-said groups (except, of course, Har.⁴ and Pa.), is also left out by Skeat and in the Globe Ed. (Wright inserts ll. 11—12 from Tw., Morris from Lan.), but I do not see the necessity of following them. For I take the sense of this passage to be 'From both these gifts men have (or derive) frequently more (things) for their damage (disadvantage) than for their profit (pro).' Nor does the metre require here the omission of a syllable.

L. 13 (301) myn owene master deere: the physician; owene here an expression of endearment, as in Mod. Engl.

L. 14 (302) pitous: piteous, sad, lamentable. Tw. has here (v. 12236) the following note, 'This [pitous] is the reading of two good MSS. A [i. e. Har.⁵] and HA. [i. e. Hai.] but I believe it to be a gloss. The other copies read erneful, which is near the truth. It should 'be ermeful, etc.' It is curious that none of these MSS. is extant.

L. 15 (303) natheles: nevertheless; s. l. 525. — is no fors: it is no matter; it is to be supplied, for the sense. Sometimes Chaucer omits it is, and simply writes no fors (s. Sk.'s note). 'Doch nichts für ungut, lasst, es soll nicht schaden' (Hertzberg).

L. 16 (304) praye: I have restored the correct form though only few MSS. have the final -e, and though this one does not count as a syllable here; but cf. ll. 285, 677, & 678. — so saue: that he may save, s. ll. 21 & 572; and cp. Troilus III, 1470. — thy gentil cors: thy noble body, thy worthy person ('euren edlen Leib' H.); cors stands here, and in other places (s. l. 50 and B 2098, Sir Topas) paraphrastically for the personal pronoun, as mon cors, ton cors in Old French for moi-même, toi-même, etc.; the same in MH. Germ. lîp. Cp. 'my little body' in Shakspeare's Merchant of Venice, I, 2, 1. — The meaning of 'corpse' is found in l. 376.

L. 17 (305) vrinals: vessels containing urine, which in former times served for the determination of a disease. Mr. Jephson (in Bell's Ed.) refers to Shakspeare's Henry VI, I, sc. 2, where Fallstaff alludes to the same method. — Jurdones: chamber pots; Tw. quotes (v. 12239) Walsingham (p. 288), who says, 'duae ollae, quas Jordanes vocamus; ad ejus collum colligantur'. 'This is part of the punishment of a pretended Phisicus et astrologus, who had deceived the people by a false prediction. Hollingshed calls them two jorden pots, p. 440'. — Perhaps we ought to read Jurdanes, as Sk. does according to the derivation of the word, and the reading of a great number of MSS. But as this termination differs in other MSS., we had better leave it as it is in E.—S. also next l.

L. 18 (306) ypocras: derived from Hippocrates (born in 460 B. C.). Sk. thinks that it does not signify here the name of the famous Greek physician, but a beverage named after him. According to Halliwell's Dictionary 'it was composed of wine, with spices and sugar, strained through a cloth. It is said to have taken its name from Hippocrates' sleeve, the term apothecaries gave to a strainer'. Sk. then quotes a receipt for making it and some other authorities on the subject. But he is unable to give a sufficient explanation of the word 'Galiones' (or Galianes, as some MSS. spell it), which, no doubt, goes back to the name of the Greek physician Galenus (born A. D. 131), in the middle ages generally called Galien(us), and which he supposes also to signify a drink. But if we take into consideration that it is the unlettered Host who is speaking, we need not seek real medicaments in these expressions, but may as well assume that Chaucer wanted to represent the landlord as quoting some names which he had heard used by medical men (s. Gen. Prol. l. 431), without knowing their exact meaning. This would also account for the curious termination -ones, ryming with Iurdones, both, it appears, wrongly pronounced by 'oure hoste', who also corrupts 'corpus domini' into 'corpus bones' (l. 26), and excuses himself for his misquotations (l. 23).

L. 19 (307) boyste: box, from O. F. boiste, M. F. boîte; I do not understand why Sk. drops the final -e, which, besides, is required here by the metre. — letuarie: electuary, remedy; Germ. 'Latwerge'; pronounce *letváry*ê (y cons.), the same as Marie next line (*máry*ê); cp. Gen. Prol. 426, and below l. 28, 117/18, 393/94, 511/12, 563/64, 595/96, 665/66, etc.

L. 20 (308) Seinte: the final e it to be added here, though wanting in E. and most MSS.; it is frequently sounded before names of Saints (e. g. Gen. Pr. ll. 120, 509, 697, etc., and below l. 397), although against the strict rules of the inflexion of adjectives, but in this composition probably influenced by the Latin vocatives 'sancte, sancta', used in the Latin church services. Cp. ten Brink, § 242.

L. 21 (309) So mote I theen: As I may hope to prosper; 'bei meiner Seel!' (H.); mote is the subjunctive mood; so the spelling of E. must be altered; the indicative is found ll. 39, 437, 461, the subj. pret. l. 503. (Cf. ten Brink, § 198, Kittr., p. 330). — thee(n), to thrive, O. E. þêon, is only used in such asseverations by Chaucer; s. e. g. D. 1215 (Wife of B. 's T.) and below l. 659. — propre: handsome; 'schmuck' (H.).

L. 22 (310) lyk a prelat: Sk. is quite right in rejecting Mr. Jephson's suggestion that the Doctor was in holy orders; but he is wrong, I think, in supposing that Chaucer uses this comparison, because the physician had been highly educated, etc. For in my opinion this refers to the sumptuous appearance of the Doctor, who, according to the Gen. Pr. l. 439, was all clad 'in sangwyn and in pers'. — Ronyan: the name of a Scotch saint, who lived in the seventh or the eighth century, but of whom only little is known. Sk., who gives more particulars about him (s. note to l. 310) says, 'It looks as if the Host and the Pardoner were not very clear about the saint's name, only knowing him to swear by'. A still greater ignorance on this subject is shown by several scribes, who substitute all sorts of saints' names for 'Ronian'; s. various readings. According to Sk., it ought to have been Ronan (cp. 'St. Ronan's Well' by Walter Scott). — S. l. 32 below.

L. 23 (311). Seyde I nat wel? Tw. says that this phrase must remind us of the similar one 'Said I well', which occurs so frequently in the mouth of Shakspeare's Host of the Garter (s. Merry Wives of Windsor I, 3, and II, 1 & 3), and together with other resemblances, may make us believe that Shakspeare, when he drew that character, had not forgotten his Chaucer. — terme: in learned or professional terms; Sk. refers to Gen. Prol., l. 323. — The Edd. following the false reading of Har.⁴, put a query after wel and after terme; Glo., which takes its text from E., puts a query only in the latter place, but this entirely spoils the sense, for the Host never said before that he could not speak in learned terms. It is only now that he is afraid of not having used the right expressions, for which he apologises, as it were.

L. 24 (312) I woot: I know; inf. witen (cf. Germ. wissen); thou woost l. 522, ye woot l. 498, etc.; preterite: wiste; s. ll. 82, 225; contracted with ne into noot, l. 528, and nyste., l. 199 (cp. ten Brink, § 271). The same contraction is still in use in the phrase 'will he, nill he'. — thou doost myn herte to erme: thou makest my heart grieve; cf. Skeat's note on erme, which word only once more occurs in Chaucer; s. Boke of the Duchesse,

l. 80, where the MSS. have spoilt it into yerne, which shows that this verb was growing obsolete in the 15th century; s. also the various readings under the text. — Observe, besides, that doon in connection with an infinitive, with or without the preposition to, has in Chaucer the meaning of ‘to cause, to make’; cf. Einkenel, l. c. pp. 236 and 255; s. also l. 502 and Compl. to Pitee, l. 7. — Maken has the same meaning and construction s. l. 142.

L. 25 (313) cardyacle: spasm, pain about the heart; ‘Herzweh’, from the Greek καρδιαζός, so that the correct form of the word would be ‘cardiac’, which is still used in medical terms. Cp. Sk.’s note, who also refers to a paragraph in Batman upon Bartholomè (VII, c. 32). — E. and other MSS. of the same group have a curious mistake here in writing Cardinacle, as if this word were derived from Cardinal — or is it one of the Host’s corruptions?

L. 26 (314) bones: the ignorant Host (cp. note to l. 18) apparently confuses the two oaths ‘by corpus Domini’ and ‘by Cristes bones’ (Sk.); some MSS. try to correct this mistake by changing ‘bones’ into ‘Dominus’; the correct form is only found in Th., wherefrom Tw. probably took his reading. But apart from its spoiling the metre, this correction is quite superfluous, as the landlord repeatedly uses the phrase ‘by corpus bones’; s. C. T., B 1625 (Shipman’s T.), B 3087 and 3096 (Monk’s Prol.). — triacle: a remedy, in general (s. B 479, Man of Law’s T.), a restorative remedy; the word is a corruption of theriaque, Lat. theriaca, Gr. θηριαζόν (φαρμαζόν), Germ. ‘Theriak.’, originally a remedy against the bite of venomous animals, especially snakes. — From this word also the Mod. Engl. ‘treacle’, a sort of syrup, is derived.

L. 27 (315) draught: as the word originally was a monosyllable, and as the inorganic e found in E. and other MSS. is mute here, it is better suppressed, though in other passages it must be sounded; s. ll. 72 & 75, and cp. l. 64, note. — moyste: new, fresh, but generally it has the modern meaning of ‘moist’; in the Manciple’s Prol. (H 60) we find the form moysty also applied to ale as differing from ‘old ale’. Cp. Sk.’s n. — corny: strong of the corn or malt (Tw.); ‘körnig’ (H.).

L. 28 (316) myrie: merry, pron. mir-ye (cp. l. 19); but Chaucer has different forms of this word: myrre (l. 555), merie (l. 595), etc., which all appear in ryme. Cf. ten Brink, § 230, and s. A 802, 1386, E 2218.

L. 30 (318) beel amy: good friend, mostly spelt belamy, is a common form of address in Old French poetry (cf. Sk.'s n.). Here it is evidently used in a familiar way of speaking. — thou: in certain groups of MSS. (Se., Te.¹, Co., Pe.) we find John instead of this pronoun, which, considering the repeated application of this name to priests in Chaucer (s. B 3119 and 4000), is not impossible here. But though the former word may be as well a misreading for the latter as vice versâ, it is not likely that John was in the original, because the Har.⁴-group, with which those named before go back to the same source, has also thow.

L. 31 (319) myrthe: mirth, pleasure; here: merry tale (cf. the reading of Th.). — Iape: jest, joke; 'Schnurre, Posse' (H.); s. also l. 106.

L. 32 (320) Ronyon: s. l. 22; observe that the word here has only two syllables and rymes with anon.

L. 33 (321). And f. But in E. and the two MSS. closely related to it, is certainly wrong. — Ale stake: an inn-sign which projected horizontally from the inn, just like a bar which supports a painted sign at the present day. At the end of an ale-stake a large garland or a bunch of some evergreen was commonly suspended (cf. Gen. Prol. ll. 666/67). S. Sk.'s note, in which an ordinance of the time of Richard II. is quoted, regulating the length of such ale-stakes.

L. 34 (322) Cake: the old cakes were mostly made of dough (Sk.), and, I should think, without sugar or other ingredients; something like those biscuits one gets at English inns to eat with one's cheese. A picture of the hardness and the size of such cakes is drawn in the Gen. Prol. (l. 668), where we are told that the Somnour had made himself a buckler of a cake, and in the Reeve's T. (A 4094, etc.), where we learn that the Miller's Wife had baked a cake of half a bushel of flour.

L. 35 (323) thise gentils: the gentlefolk, the decent people; 'die feinen Leute' (H.); cf. A 3113 (Miller's Prol.); i. e. Knight, Squire, Prioress, the Priests, etc.; on the meaning of thise s. l. 5 and l. 250, note. — gonne: s. l. 1, note.

L. 36 (324) lat: the usual form of the imperative of le(e)ten, before an infinitive; cp. l. 371, n. — ribaudie: ribaldry, vulgar talk; 'Zoten, Schmutzereien' (H.).

L. 37 (325) may: s. l. 8, note. — leere: (1) to teach, (2) to learn; cp. l. 290.

L. 38 (326) wit: wisdom, knowledge; 'Lehrhaftes' (H.).

L. 39 (327) graunte: to agree, consent, assure; s. l. 534. — ywis: adv., certainly; cp. Germ. 'gewiss'; still used by Shakspeare (e. g. Merchant of Venice, II 9), and modern poets, but frequently mistaken for a form of the verb witen, and consequently spelt I wis. — I moot: s. l. 21, n., and observe that a number of MSS. have here the original preterite must(e) instead of the present, the same as in Mod. Engl. — Cf. also ll. 437 and 461; l. 503 moste is the subjunctive of the preterite.

L. 40 (328) honeste: decent; cf. ll. 269 & 340. — The following Latin heading is taken from I. Timothy VI, 10; in Luther's translation: '(Denn) Geiz ist eine Wurzel alles Übels'. — omnium: omitted on purpose by the poet on account of the metre, has been restored here and ll. 46 & 138 by some scribes, who thought they knew better.

L. 41 (329) Lordynges: sirs, ladies and gentlemen, the usual way of addressing a company in the C. T.; 'Herrschaften' (H.); s. ll. 166 & 285 (note). But 'sires' is also frequent; s. ll. 372, 451, 472, 631. — chirches: whether this reading, or chirche was the original one, cannot be decided. — Cf. Intro., ch. V, and Gen. Prol. ll. 708 sqq.: 'He was in chirche a noble ecclesiaste', etc.

L. 42 (330) I peyne me: observe that the personal pronoun is always used with reflective verbs by Chaucer, instead of the Mod. Engl. 'myself', etc., s. ll. 107, 295, 322, 330, 375, 595, 678; my self ll. 141 & 171, is = 'I myself'; s. also l. 454. — The ancient usage is still frequent in Shakspeare. Cp. Koch II, § 315.; ten Brink, § 270, n. 7. — hauteyn: according to

Tw. & Sk. (Gl. Ind.) it means here 'loud'; but as I do not know of any other passage where this signification occurs, I should prefer the usual meaning = haughty, arrogant, overbearing' (cf. proud l. 428, note), which would very well agree with the character of the following sermon; Germ. 'anmassend, dreist'.

L. 43 (331) rounde: fully, sonorously; the adverb requires the addition of -e, though wanting in E. and other MSS., and not sounded here. — loude in some MSS. seems only the would-be correction of scribes, who introduced here the more ordinary expression instead of an apparently uncommon one. — The same seems to be the case with doth for gooth in some MSS. (cp. l. 109), so that we need not look for a common origin of these deviations.

L. 44 (332) kan: know, as frequently in Chaucer (s. Sk., Gl. Ind., s. n.). — by rote: by heart; 'auswendig' (H.)

L. 47 (335) pronounce: to announce; whennes, &c.: from Rome; s. Gen. Prol., l. 671.

L. 48 (336) bulles: cf. Introd., ch. V, and l. 621 below. 'The court of Rome granted the privilege of distributing [indulgences] to some religious order [usually to the Dominican friars; s. Sk.'s note], for which that order paid a certain sum, and there made the most of their bargain'. Bell's ed. III, p. 68. — alle and some: one and all; s. E 941 (Clerk's T.), and cp. Einkenkel, l. c., p. 98.

L. 49 (337). By lige lord is here meant the pope, who put his personal seal under 'patents', i. e. documents, conferring the privilege of selling indulgences. (Cp. Sk.'s note.)

L. 50 (338) warente: to warrant, to protect — my body: s. l. 16 (note).

L. 51 (339) ne — ne: neither — nor; cp. l. 95 & 435 — clerk: a scholar preparing for the priesthood (Germ. 'Kandidat des Pfarramts'; a learned man, a writer (Germ. 'Gelehrter, Schriftsteller'); a man in holy orders, a clergyman, an ecclesiastic; (Germ. 'Geistlicher'); cp. also Skeat's note to A. 285, and s. l. 103 below.

L. 52 (340) distourbe of: to prevent from, interfere, disturb in, etc.

L. 55 (343) Patriark: a dignitary of the Eastern Church, superior to the order of archbishops (s. Webster).

L. 56 (344) I speke: perhaps we should write speke I, as some of the better MSS. read; cp. l. 150, n. — a wordes fewe: a few words; the separation of fewe from a is curious, and seems to have struck several scribes as unusual, who transformed the phrase into wordes a fewe, where 'wordes' must be considered as a genitive partitive (cf. Einenkel, l. c., p. 91). But the former position is also sometimes used by Chaucer in rymes; s. l. 532 below and Troilus IV, 1280.

L. 57 (345). To saffron with, etc.: with which to colour my sermon (predicacioun; s. l. 119). 'Saffron was used to give colour as well as flavour' (Tw.) Sk. adds a few quotations concerning this use. To 'savoure', which is the reading of a number of MSS. would mean 'to make tasteful'; which certainly does not make so good a sense as the former.

L. 58 (346) hem is sufficiently supported by E., Heu., Phy., Bo.², Har.⁴, etc. to make unnecessary the alteration into men, which several Edd. (Tw., Wr., M., B., Sk.) have introduced according to a good many MSS., as Chaucer does not always appear a very strict grammarian; cf. ll. 61 (they), 257/58 (him and his), 481, and s. Book of the Duch., l. 1311. On the contrary, 'men' seems the intended correction of the scribe of the common source from which all the groups in question were derived. — Similar loose constructions appear in Shakspeare; e. g. 'Their candles', Macbeth II, 1, 5.

L. 59 (347) longe cristal stones: 'evidently hollow pieces of crystal in which relics were kept' (Sk.). According to the Gen. ProL. (l. 700), he had a 'glas' filled with 'pigges bones'. cf. Introd., p. XXIX.

L. 60 (348) cloutes: small pieces of cloth, rags, supposed to be remnants of the clothes of saints.

L. 61 (349) wenen: to suppose, imagine; the pret. s. l. 494. — they: these people; cf. l. 58 (note). — echoon: every one, each.

L. 62 (350) The omission of I in E. shows that this MS. cannot be implicitly trusted; cp. Introd. p. XXXVII. — latoun: a kind of mixed metal, somewhat resembling brass both in its nature and colour, but still more like pinchbeck; s. Sk.'s note, who also quotes a passages from Todd's Illustrations of Chaucer, p. 350, saying that a cross of laton frequently occurs in old Church Inventories. Then Sk. cites Batman upon Bartholomè (XVI, 5), where we find the Latin name for laton 'Auricalcum', which is made by 'meddling of Copper, of tinne, and of auripigment, and with other mettal . . . it hath colour and likeness of gold, but not the value'. — Germ. 'Tomback'. — sholder bone: a sheep's shoulder bone was formerly much used for divination, among divers nations, which science was called 'Spatulamancia'. Chaucer alludes to it also in his Parson's T. (602), where he speaks of 'thilke horrible swering of addiuracioun and coniuracioun, as doon thise false enchauntours or nigromanciens in bacins ful of water . . . or in a shulder boon of a sheep'. S. Sk.'s note, to l. 351, who quotes several authorities on this subject, but seems to overlook that this bone is here not used as a means for prophecy, but for working marvelous cures.

L. 63 (351) hooly Jew: most probably Jacob; s. l. 76 and cp. Genesis XXX, 32 sqq. It is curiously the same passage to which Shakspeare makes Shylock allude (Merchant of Venice I 13). — Cp. Sk.'s note.

L. 64 goode men: the common phrase of address to hearers in old homilies answering to the modern 'dear brethren' (s. Sk.'s note to l. 616 [904]); 'Ihr guten Leute' (H.) — As the final e of goode does not sound in this expression, it might be written good-men, thus forming a compound noun; but as only part of the MSS. drop this e I have kept it with E., cp. ll. 73 & 616. — taak keepe: take care, pay attention (to); on the shortened form of the imperative s. note to l. 174; keepe was originally a monosyllable, but as the final e is occasionally to be pronounced in Chaucer (s. l. 489 below and Book of the Duch. l. 6), I have not suppressed it here, following E. and other MSS., considering that the dative-e of sheepe need not be counted as mute; s. Kittredge, Troilus, p. 36 sq., and cp. ll. 27 (n.), 69, 82, 85, 109, 272, 503, 570.

L. 67 (355) worm means here 'snake'; so still in Shakspeare's Anthony & Cleopatra V, 2. Cf. Sk. The Germ. 'Wurm', had formerly the same meaning; cp. e. g. Schiller's Kampf mit dem Drachen: 'Halb Wurm erschien's, halb Molch und Drache' etc. —

L. 68 (356). The great variety of readings here must be explained by assuming a gap in the common original of the groups in question which the different scribes tried to fill up as well as they could; cf. ll. 5/6, note.

L. 69 (357) I have restored here and in the next l. the final -e omitted by E. and two other MSS., as more only exceptionally seems to have been treated as a monosyllable (s. A 2069, Kn.'s T.); on the dative -e in sore s. ll. 64, n., & 85 (84 note). — Glo. Ed. strictly follows E.

L. 70 (358) pokkes: pox (which is really a plural). — scabbe: scab; Germ. 'Grind, Räude'.

L. 71 (359) hool: sound, hale; cf. Germ. 'heil'; the same word as the Mod. Engl. whole, the spelling of which is far from being etymological.

L. 73 (361) goode man: husbandman; master of the house (Sk.); might be written good-man, as Sk. has it (cf. Fr. bon-homme); but as only few MSS. have this way of spelling I have left it as found in E. and the majority of MSS.; cf. l. 64, note.

L. 74 (362) wyke: week; another form, wouke or wowke, seems to occur also (s. ten Brink, § 35 a, Kittredge, p. 15), but it is impossible to state which really is Chaucer's, as neither is found in ryme.

L. 75 (363) ffastyng: Sk. thinks that the final -e may be sounded here, but in the interior of the verse, this is not very likely; s. Kittredge, l. c., § 120; ydrinken, as Tw. writes to correct this verse, is grammatically impossible. On the contrary, this l. is a nine-syllable verse, to which alternative Sk. also alludes. Cf. Freudenberger, Über das Fehlen des Auftakts, etc., p. 25; Kittredge, l. c., § 146, and s. ll. 207, 214, 244, 320, 326, 354, 498 (?). — drinken: the final -n must be added here to avoid hiatus. — draughte: here with inorganic -e; cp. l. 27; as a dissyllable it appears sometimes in ryme; s. Gen. Prol. 135 (: raughte); Book Duch. 682 (: caughte).

L. 76 (364) thilke: that, the same, the . . . mentioned before; s. l. 465. — Jew: s. l. 63, note. — eldres: ancestors.

L. 77 (365). A similar superstition in Germany is mentioned by Mannhardt, Mythologische Forschungen, p. 187 sq., according to which a pig's bone, called 'der Jud' auf der Wanne' is mixed with the seed to make it grow better.

L. 78 (366) sire: sirs or sires, as part of the MSS. (B-type) and all Edd. write, seems to deserve the preference. But as the singular is found in all MSS. of the A-type, and is not impossible here (the speaker, as it were, addressing one of his hearers in particular; s. a man — his — he, etc. in the following ll.), I have not altered the reading of E. and its group. — kelith f. heleth in Har.⁴, which reading is adopted by Wr., B., & M., and held worth mentioning by Sk., can only be a clerical error; s. l. 81.

L. 79 (367) be: on the subjunctive in a concessive clause, s. Koch II, § 55, Mätzner II, 1, 126, and ll. 82, 141, 171, 200, 662.

L. 80 (368) potage: broth; 'Suppe' (H.).

L. 81 (369) mistryste: to mistrust; also spelt with -u-; s. Gen. Pr. 501 (: ruste).

L. 82 (370) soothe: truth; Sk. and other Edd. (except Glo.) have sooth; but that the final -e was sometimes sounded is shown by the ryme: to þe G 662; s. Sk.'s note to this verse, and cp. l. 64, n. — wiste: subj. pret. of witen (cp. ll. 24 and 225); s. l. 79.

L. 83 (371) Al: here and frequently else used as a concessive conjunction = although, even if, but then the verb must precede the subject; s. ll. 161 and 163. — Hertzberg translates this l., 'Und hielte sie zwei Pfaffen sich und mehr'.

L. 84 (372) Miteyn: mitten, glove; 'Fausthandschuh' (H.). This word is spelt without a final e by most MSS. in this l., and by nearly half in the next, though the French original (mitaine) has it, and Chaucer is generally very exact in retaining French terminations in -e; s. ten Brink, § 222 sqq., Kittredge, l. c., § 20 sqq. The same is to be said of grayn in l. 85, where the -e found in a good many MSS. might be considered as the dative-e (s. l. 64, n. and cp. l. 109 berne). But as exceptions must be admitted, and the inflective-e is doubtful in words of Romance origin, I have made no alterations in the spellings of E. and other MSS.

L. 85 (373) hand: s. l. 110, n.

L. 88 (376) So þat: conditional conjunction = if only, provided that; cp. l. 619. — pens: pence, the usual plural of peny. — grotes: groat; the value of a grote was 4^d; s. Sk.'s note to l. 657 (945).

L. 89 (377) O thyng: (of) one thing; s. Einenkel, l. c., 62, who considers this phrase as an absolute accusative of measure. — Cp. l. 444.

L. 90 (378) wight: person, being.; cf. Germ. 'Wicht'.

L. 91 (379) synne: the final -e is to be sounded here before h: Cp. Sk.'s note, and s. l. 141 & 188.

L. 92 (380) be yshriuen: to be shriven; 'beichten' (H).

L. 94 (382) ymaad: this form of the part. past of maken is required here by the metre, as all Edd. have it, whilst the form found in E., etc. is to be employed in l. 257. — Cokewold: cuckold; Germ. 'Hahnrei'.

L. 95 (383) shal: Sk. (s. also Tw.) adopts here the plural shul(n) found in a number of MSS., but not in E. But as folk can also take the verb in the singular (Cp. Mätzner II, 1, 144; Kittredge, § 43; s. l. 130; and cp. l. 104 [peple is], l. 132 [folk — doon], and l. 477, n.), no alteration is necessary. — no p. ne no g: neither power nor mercy; cf. ll. 51, 156, 267; on the double negation, s. Koch, II, § 580 sqq., Mätzner II, 2, 134.

L. 96 (384) offren: to present alms; 'opfern' (H.).

L. 97 (385) out of: without, free from; s. Einenkel, p. 158, and cp. l. 534.

L. 98 (386) They referring to the singular hym (l. 97) seems odd; so that a few MSS. insert He for it, others hem

f. hym. But as a greater number of persons are meant by who-so, this construction is not impossible, and is indeed found in other places, in Chaucer as well as in Mod. Engl. Cf. also note to l. 58; cp. Mätzner II, 1, 140, Einenkel, 45—6, and s. l. 648 below. Sk.'s alterations of They into He, and hem in l. 99 into him, in which he apparently follows Tw., consequently are superfluous. — The same is to be said of his writing in for on, as the latter preposition really occurs in phrases of the kind; s. Mätzner II, 1, 352 and Einenkel. p. 186; but perhaps a, found in more MSS. than on, might have been inserted here, if an alteration of the E-text is necessary at all.

L. 99 (387) assoille: to absolve, pardon; cp. ll. 625 & 645. — Sk. refers to the very similar practise of the Dominican friar Tetzl in the year 1517, by whose shameless activity Luther was roused to his famous denunciations. For an illustration he gives a long quotation from Michelet's Life of Luther, transl. by W. Hazlitt (note to l. 387); cf. also Introduction, ch. V. — Pronounce th'Auctoritee; on this frequent sort of elision s. ten Brink, § 269, and cp. ll. 159, 241, 287 below — Still in Shaksp., e. g. Macbeth I, 7, etc.

L. 101 (389) gaude: trick; 'Kniff, Spass' (H.).

L. 102 (390) An hundred mark: According to Sk.'s note, the value of a mark at that time was about 13 s. 4^d; and 100 marks £ 13/. 4^d (1333 German marks). But this sum must be multiplied by ten, in order to make allowance for the value of money in Chaucer's age. — sith: conj., since; also adv.; s. l. 581.

L. 103 (391) clerk: s. l. 51, note. — pulpét: pulpit; 'Kanzel'.

L. 104 (392) lewed: ignorant, unlearned; s. l. 149; is — yset: on the frequent use of be(n) as an auxiliary in Early Engl., s. Koch II, § 44; Mätzner II, 1, 76, and cp. ll. 375 & 538.

L. 105 (393) I preche so, etc.: s. ll. 41 sq.

L. 106 (394) fals: i. e. with a view to cheat; Germ. 'trügerisch'; Iape: s. l. 31.

L. 108 (396) Est and West: towards the east and west, to the right and left, to and fro.; local accusative; cf. l. 230 and Einkenkel, p. 50. — bekke vp-on, &c.: to nod to, &c. (in his lively way of speaking); ‘nicke . . zu’.

L. 109 (397) dowue: pigeon; cp. Shaksp.; Merch. of V., II, 2 ‘dish of doves’. The Mod. Engl. dove is generally used to denote the tame species of the genus ‘Columba’, as turtle-dove, ring-dove, &c. — Sittyng: the final -e is quite correct (s. l. 75), though mute here; I do not understand why it is suppressed by Sk., who needlessly follows here Tw., Wr., &c. — bern: barn; ‘Scheunendach’ (H.); as for the dative berne, cp. l. 64 (n.). — Mr. Jephson remarks here: — ‘This is a most felicitous simile. The strutting and bowing of a cock-pigeon on the roof of a barn recalls the action of a popular orator with ludicrous exactness’ (Bell III, 71).

L. 110 (398) handes: I have not altered this into hondes, the usual form of Chaucer (s. ten Brink, § 13 β), as this dissyllabic form appears again with a ll. 155—56 (landes) in E. and a number of better MSS. In all other cases, however, o prevails, mostly northern MSS. having a before n + d (or g, s. ll. 85, 103, 319/20, 357/58, 580, 633/34, 663/64). Still I thought it more cautious to leave also here the spelling of E. untouched. — yerne: adv. = eagerly, quickly, briskly; cp. Mod. Engl. to yearn and the Germ. adv. ‘gerne’, which have kept more the original meaning of this stem.

L. 112 (400) cursednesse: wickednesse, sin.; s. also l. 607.

L. 113 (401) hem: the peple (l. 108). — free: liberal, generous.

L. 114 (402) yeue: the final -n in other MSS. must be dropped here because of the metre, in order to make this word a monosyllable; cf. ll. 179, 252, 301, 533, 574. — namely: especially, in particular (Sk.); s. l. 275.; ‘zumal’ (H.).

L. 115 (403) nat = nought, nothing; wynne: to gain, to make money; cf. l. 173.

L. 116 (404) no thyng: adv. = not at all, by no means; still used in some phrases, as ‘nothing afraid, nothing daunted’. Cp. also Einkenkel, p. 62, and s. l. 476 below.

L. 117 (405) rekke: to care. — pat, though omitted by E. and several other MSS. must be supplied here on account of the metre. — beried: pron. bér-ýed = buried (cp. l. 19, n.); inf. berie l. 596.

L. 118 (406) goon a blakeberied: According to Sk. this phrase, which neither Tw., nor Bell could sufficiently explain, means: (Though their souls) go a-black-berrying, i. e. wander wherever they like. The difficulty was to show that the (apparent) past participle was ever used for the verbal substantive (or gerund). Among the examples for this use adduced by Sk. we will mention one in Piers Plowman (CIX, 138), where we read of 'folk that gon a-begged', and two in Chaucer, F 1580 (Frank. T.) and D 354 (Wyf of Bathe's T.). He thinks that -ed is here not the ending of the past part., but a corruption of -eth, which is sometimes found at the end of a verbal substantive, e. g. 'he rod an honteth' in Robert of Gloucester (Specimens of Engl., ed. Morris & Skeat, p. 14, l. 387). — H. has 'in die Fichten gehen'.

*For oft good predicacioun
Cometh of evel entencioun.*

Sk. quotes Phil. I, 15; in Luther's translation: 'Etliche zwar predigen Christum, auch um Hass und Haders willen'.

L. 121 (409) for plesance of folk: in order to gain the favour of the people; 'Volksgunst' (H.).

L. 122 (410) avaunce: to advance, promote, help forward; 'fördern'. — ypocrisye: hypocrisy; 'Heuchelei' (H.).

L. 123 (411) veyne glorie: vain-glory; 'Eitelkeit; Ruhmsucht' (H.); the termination of glorie is to be slurred; s. ll. 10, n., and 337.

L. 124 (412) noon oother weyes: in no other way or manner; cp. Einkenel, p. 66., who thinks that other wyse (found in a good many MSS.) is not Chaucerian. — debate: to fight, quarrel; 'streiten'.

L. 125 (413). Sk. quotes a similar phrase from Piers Plowman (B, 87), and refers to Rom. III, 13 and Ps. CXL, 3. The former passage runs in Luther's transl.: — 'Sie schärfen ihre Zunge wie eine Schlange; Otterngift ist unter ihren Lippen.' Cp. also l. 133 below. — hym is here the right reading, though several MSS. have hem, and bey in the next l.; s. the ryme in l. 127. — smerte: now 'smart', as an adj. sharp; bitter, painful; but it may be considered here also as an adv. = sharply, sorely, etc.

L. 126 (414) asterte(n): escape.

L. 127 (415) defame(n): slander; 'verleumden' (H.); the subst. s. l. 324.

L. 128 (416) Hath: several MSS. have the subjunctive Haue; but cf. l. 311. — trespase(n) to: to trespass against, to do wrong to a person; 'sich vergehen gegen; einem zu nahe treten' (H.); s. also l. 453; cf. Einenkel, p. 217.

L. 130 (418) shal: s. ll. 95, n. and 477, n.

L. 132 (420) quyte(n): requite, repay; 'abtrumpfen' (H.). — doon: cf. l. 95; but observe that many MSS. have the singular. — displeasance(s): (give) annoyance, annoy; 'Unannehmlichkeiten bereiten'.

L. 133 (421) venym: venom, poison; cf. l. 125. — hewe: hue, colour; appearance, pretence.

L. 134 (422) semen: which Sk. (s. also Tw., Wr., B., M.) shortens into seme, can be left unaltered, if we slur the y of holy (s. l. 10, n.).

L. 135 (423) entente: intention; design, plan. — deuyse: s. l. 4, n.

L. 136 (424) of coucityse: of or about covetousness, is no doubt the correct reading, though E., its group (exc. Hod.), and a few other MSS. have for instead. If this latter prep. had been in the common original of the A-type, it must have also been in the Gg.-group, which, however, has of. Observe besides, that this clause begins with I preche of nothing, and cp. l. 145, where for is rightly found in all MSS. For here the Pardoner plainly says: 'I preach only for the sake of covetousness', and certainly, Chaucer would not have repeated the same idea again within a few lines. So Tw., Sk., and Gl. ought to have altered here the reading of their original.

L. 137/38 (425/26): cf. ll. 45/46, and l. 40, n.

L. 139 (427) agayn (or agaynes): prep., against.

L. 140 (428) vse(n): to be accustomed to, to indulge in; 'üben, ergeben sein' (H.).

L. 142 (430) maken . . to: to cause, etc.; used with and without the prep. to; s. Einkenel, p. 255, and cp. l. 24, n. — twynne(n): to depart, to separate, a verb that seems to have been growing obsolete in the 15th century (v. lectio variorum).

L. 143 (431): soore: adv., sorely.

L. 146 (434) oghte: generally used without the prep. to before the infinitive, but sometimes with it; s. l. 224, and cp. Einkenel, p. 233. — ynogh suffise: this pleonastic phrase occurs several times in Chaucer; s. B 3648 (Monk's T.) and E 1540 (Merch.'s T.).

L. 149 (437) lewed: s. l. 104. — olde stories were indeed frequently employed by medieval preachers for examples and illustrations suitable to the taste of rude and ignorant hearers. The most famous collection of tales made for this purpose was perhaps the 'Gesta Romanorum', which was widely spread in England. Cf. Spalding's History of Engl. Lit. pp. 55—58.

L. 150 (438) kan they, &c.: the inversion of the subject in principal clauses commencing with another word than the subject is very usual in Chaucer, but begins to be given up by later MSS.; cf. Mätzner, II, 2, 542 sqq, and s. ll. 56, 168, 236, 310, 649. — reporte: repeat, tell again; s. l. 381. — holde: keep in memory.

L. 151 (439) troue: believe, think, trust; still in use in Early Mod. Engl., especially in the phrase I trow; e. g. Shaksp., Richard II., II, 1, 218; Merry Wives I, 4, 140, etc. — the whiles: conj., while; s. Book of the Duch., l. 151, and still used by Spenser (s. Koch II, p. 499); it seems to be the best reading here, though only found in E. and another MS.; for, in that whiles, which we read in other MSS., that appears to be superfluous, being repeated again in l. 153 (but cp. notes to ll.

8 & 351). The other variations in the different MSS., which otherwise might be taken into consideration, must be rejected here on account of the metre. So, on the whole, there is no necessity for abandoning the text of E. — Tw. has that whiles, Wr., &c., whiles.

L. 152 (440) for I teche: because I teach, by my teaching (Sk.).

L. 153 (441) pouerte: poverty; pron. here póvert'; in other places, it is to be accented poérte, ryming with herte (Man of L.'s T., B 99) and sherte (Troilus IV, 1520); cf. ten Brink, § 221. So Sk. need not have suppressed the final -e here, as do Wr., &c. — willfully: adv., not in its present meaning, obstinately, &c., but = willingly, voluntarily. Cf. Sk.'s note, who gives several instances of this usage in Early writers; 'freiwillig' (H.).

L. 154 (442) Nay: no, surely not, was in Early Engl. purely negative; its modern use as an amplification (not this only, even, &c.) will scarcely be found before the 16th century. S. l. 658. — trewely (pron. trū-e-lī): truly, indeed, certainly.

L. 155 (443) londes, and l. 156 hondes: s. l. 110, n.

L. 156 (444) nat . . no: cp. l. 95 n., and observe that many scribes begin to omit one negation or the other.

L. 157 (445) Pronounce: báskettès: cf. Freudenberger, l. c., p. 47 and Sk.'s n). — Mr. Jephson refers to a passage in Fleury's Eecl. Hist., according to which making baskets was the employment of Egyptian monks in the early ages. Sk. quotes a line from Piers Plowman (B. XV., 285), where we read that St. Paul made 'panyers'. Though this statement does not agree with Acts XVIII, 3, it was certainly St. Paul (cp. 'Apostles', l. 159) who set the example of labouring with his hands. For more particulars, s. Sk.'s note (445).

L. 158 (446) ydelly: idly, i. e. for nothing, for a mere trifle (as those poor labourers do).

L. 159 (447) Pron. th' Apostles; s. l. 99, n.; Sk. thinks the context implies that some of the Apostles (s. l. 157) made baskets. But the verse may quite as well allude to

l. 153, viz. that they lived in 'wilful' poverty. — countrefete: imitate, counterfeit.

L. 160 (448). That wolle is the right reading here, in spite of the deviations of several MSS., is shown by l. 622. — Sk. refers to the description of the very similar practice of the mendicant friars as given in Chaucer's Sompnour's Tale (D 1746 sqq.). All sorts of things for which they begged are enumerated there, as bushels of wheat, malt, or rye, a piece of cheese, of cake, of brawn, of bacon, of beef, etc.

L. 161 (449) Al: s. l. 83, n. — page: youth, lad, not only in its usual meaning of serving-boy in attendance upon a gentleman or gentlewoman, but also signifying a farmer's or a shepherd's boy; s. l. 400; 'Knecht' (H.). — Mr. Jephson (Bell's Ed. III, 72) thinks that prestes in Har.⁴ (and consequently in Wr. and M.) is more expressive than poucreste (dissyllable!) but this reading, being quite isolated, is nothing but a clerical error.

L. 163 (451) sterue: to die; the present meaning of to starve is later than Chaucer; s. ll. 577 & 600 (pret. storuen). But the copyist of the common source of the Se.- and Pe.-groups seems to have taken famyne (here subst.) for a verb synonymous to sterve in its modern sense, by altering for into or.

L. 164 (452) Wr. is, as usual, so wrapt up in his Har.⁴-MS. that he takes no notice of Tw.'s reading of vine, but sticks to wyn(e) — so do B. and M. — though only the former makes the right sense.

L. 165 (453) wenche: wench, (wanton, light) girl; 'Dirne' (H.).

L. 166 (454) lordynges: s. l. 41.

L. 167 (455) likyng: pleasure, wish. — corny ale: s. l. 27, and cp. ll. 34 and 40.

L. 168 (456) haue I: cf. l. 150, n. — Now: supply 'that' after this word.

L. 169 (457) by reson: reasonably, fairly; 'vernünftiger Weise' (H.).

L. 172 (460) moral tale: cp. l. 37.

L. 173 (461) wynne: s. l. 115, n.

L. 174 (462) hoold: for hooldeth; this shortened form of the imperative is frequent in our tale; s. ll. 64, 290, 291, 298, 371, 622, 637, and cp. ten Brink, § 189; Kittredge, § 118. — hoold youre pees: be quiet or silent, as in Mod. Engl.

L. 175 (463). For the source of this Tale, s. Introduct., ch. IV. — fflaundres: In laying the scene in this country, says Sk., Chaucer probably followed an original which is now lost. Then he quotes from Andrew Borde's Introduction of Knowledge (ch. VIII) a description of Flanders in which we read that 'the men be great drynkers'. — whilom: adv. = formerly, once upon a time; an old dative of the plural, O. E. hwilum (Koch, II, § 382).

L. 176 (464) haunteden folye: followed after, were given to foolish things; 'trieben Thorheit' (H.). Cf. l. 259.

L. 177 (465) Riot: excess; noise, noisy behaviour; 'Lärm' (H.). — hasard: gambling, a certain game at dice; s. l. 365, n. — stywe (or stewe): brothel; 'Bordell' (H.). —

L. 178 (466). Where as: a local adv., wherever, where that; 'woselbst'; cf. ll. 461, 513, 598 (n.), and s. Koch II, p. 4. — gyterne: a kind of guitar; cf. Grundriss d. germ. Phil. II, 2, 351.

L. 179 (467): pleye for pleyen in E., etc., on account of the metre; cf. l. 114. — dees: dice; perhaps we ought to write dys(e), like most MSS., and according to the rymes A 1237 (Kn.'s T.) and 4385 (Coke's T.). But, as in other cases, Chaucer may have used here double forms. Besides, note that the best MSS. of both Types have dees. Cp. also l. 335.

L. 180 (468). If we pronounce ovr' hir, drynken can keep its final n; op. ll. 295, 360, 399, and s. ten Brink, § 272.

L. 182 (470). that deueles temple: a tavern or a brothel.

L. 183 (471). superfluite: excess; 'Völlerei' (H.).

L. 185 (473). grisly: horrible, awful; 'grässlich'.

ll. 186 87 (474-5) Tyrwhitt refers to a similar passage in Chaucer's Persones Tale, 'For Cristes sake swere not so sinfully, in dismembryng of Crist, by soule, herte, bones, and body: for certes it semeth, that ye thincken that the cursed Jewes dismembred him not ynough, but ye dismembre him more' (II, 333 of his ed.). See also a later passage in the 'Pardoner', especially ll. 363, 64, and 421. Sk. adds a few more quotations from the Vision of Wm. Staunton, the Plowman's Tale, Ayenbite of Inwyt, Political, &c. Poems ed. Furnivall, Wyclif's Works, etc. — to-tere: tear in pieces.

L. 187 (475). Hem thoughte: it seemed to them; s. ll. 393, 483, 513, and cp. Mod. Engl. 'methinks, methought.' — pat: according to Har.⁴, etc. this word might be omitted, and thoughte pronounced as a dissyllable; but there is no necessity for altering the reading of E.

L. 188 (476) lough: strong pret. of laughe(=n); this seems to be the only form in Ch.'s genuine works (s. l. 673); laughede only in Rom. of the Rose (863).

L. 189 (477) Tombesteres: female dancers. Sk. observes that the termination -ster, O.E.-estre, originally was feminine, but that the feminine force of this termination became very weak in the fourteenth century, so that it began to designate also a male person; as frequently in Mod. Engl., e. g. brewster, webster, etc.; only spinster has remained entirely feminine.

L. 190 (478) ffetys: handsome, graceful; 'schlank und fein' (H.). — ffrutesteres: female sellers of fruit; 'Fruchtverkäuferinnen' (H.).

L. 191 (479); Syngeres with harpes: 'Harfenmädchen' (H.); baudes: bawds ('Kupplerin'); wafereres: confectioners; 'Waffelhändlerinnen' (H.) From Beaumont and Fletcher we learn that 'wafer-women' were often employed in amorous embassies (Sk.).

L. 192 (480) Officeres: servants; 'Dienerinnen' (H.).

L. 194 (482) annexed: attached.

L. 195 (483) holy writ: s. the Latin gloss which is found in the margin of E. and a great number of other MSS. It is derived from Eph. V, 18 (Vulgate), but the direct source of Chaucer may have been Pope Innocent's Treatise de Contemptu Mundi (cf. Introduction, ch. IV, and s. Sk. III, 444, & VI, 277), where this quotation is found, among others, lib. II, cap. 19.

L. 196 (484). Pron.: luxury^is; s. l. 10, n.

L. 199 (487) nyste = ne wiste; s. l. 24, n.

L. 200 (488). Herodes: cp. Matt. XIV, 6—11, Mark VI, 21—28. — who so wel, &c.: [as may be seen by any one] who would consult the stories carefully. Sk. explains 'stories' by a reference to Peter Comestor's Historia Scholastica, which is a sort of epitome of the Bible. Each section being called 'Historia', the whole work may very well be alluded to by the designation of 'the stories'. The account of Herod occurs there in the section entitled 'Historia Evangelica', cap. LXXII. -- The insertion of the spurious lines in the Co.-group may be accounted for by assuming that one scribe altered wel . . . soughte into wol . . . seche, and that the next then found the want of two rymes, which he supplied as well as he could.

L. 201 (489) repleet: full, replete.

L. 202 (490) heeste: order, commandment; s. ll. 352 sqq.

L. 204 (492) Senec: a nine-syllable line, with the accent on the first. The reading of Har.⁴ Seneca can scarcely be right here, as the only time where Chaucer uses this form in verse, C. T., B 3693 (Monk's T.), it is accented Séneca. In H 345 (Manciple) we have the form Senékke, and the same accentuation is mostly found in Senéc (Cp. Sk. Ind. Prop. N.), but also Sének, E 1567 (Merchant), the same as here. As for the passage in Seneca which Chaucer had in mind here, Tyrwhitt refers to Epist. LXXXIII 'Extende in plures dies illum ebrii habitum: numquid de furore dubitatis? Nunc quoque non est minor, sed breviar.'

L. 207 (495) dronkelewe: adj., addicted to drink. -- A nine-syllable l.; s. l. 75 n., and Freudenberger, p. 17.

L. 208 (496) woodnesse: fury, rage; 'Raserei und Wut' (H.); Lat. furor. — y-fallen: the addition of y- is not required by the metre; but as it is found in very good MSS., and as is in a great number of others seems to be a clerical error for y, I have inserted it here though it is missing in E.; cp. the various readings in l. 580. — shrewe: an ill-tempered person (Sk., Gl. Ind.), a man of evil nature (Note). But to me it seems to refer to the 'man . . . out of his mynde' (l. 206), so that shrewe here must mean a weak-minded person, an idiot, a lunatic. The same reference appears in Hertzberg's 'jenem'. — In

l. 531 shrewe has its more usual meaning of 'scoundrel, wretch'; 'Schuft' (H.)

L. 210 (498) glotonye: gluttony; 'Schlemmerei' (H.).

L. 211 (499) cause first: allusion to the Tale of Adam (Sk.); cf. ll. 217. sqq.

L. 213 (501) Til, etc.: refers to dampnacioun; between these two words, we must supply 'which lasted', or a similar expression. — bought . . . agayn = Lat. redemit (Sk.); cp. ll. 478 & 614 below.

L. 214 (502): Nine-syll. line; s. l. 75, n., and Freudenberger, p. 54.

L. 215 (503). Abought: part. past of abye (s. l. 468) = to pay, to atone for.

L. 216 (504) sqq.: cf. Parson's T. (I 819); 'This synne corrupted al this world. as is wel shewed | in the synne of Adam and of Eue.' — The Latin gloss in the margin is found, more or less complete, in a great number of MSS., besides E. S. Hieronymus contra Jovinianum, lib. II, c. 15; ed. Migne II. 305 (Sk.). Cp. also Innocent, l. c., lib. II, c. 18 'Gula paradisum, clausit' (Sk. III, 444).

L. 219 (507) drede: fear, doubt, uncertainty; s. l. 273.

L. 220 (508) I rede: I read; cp. ll. 454 & 505.

L. 222 (510) deffended: forbidden. Sk. refers to Milton Paradise Lost, XI, 86. — See also l. 302.

L. 224 (512) oghte vs pleyne: s. l. 146, n.; here it is used as an impersonal verb; vs is the dative. The personal construction is sometimes introduced by later scribes, who also add to before the infinitive. — For the contents of this passage, cp. Innocent, l. c. lib. II, c. 17 (Sk. III, 444—5): 'Noli avidus esse in omni epulatione, et non te effundas super omnem escam. In multis enim escis erit infirmitas; et propter crapulam multi perierunt.' Quoted from Ecclesiasticus (Sirach), XXXVII (Sk.).

L. 227 (515) mesurable: moderate; 'mässig'.

L. 229 (517) sqq.: Cp. Hieronymus contra Jovinianum, lib. II, and Johannis Salisb., Polycraticus, lib. VIII, c. 6. 'Propter breuem gulae voluptatem, terrae lustrantur et maria', (Sk.); Innocent, l. c., 'Tam brevis est gulae voluptas', etc.

Chaucer's translation 'the shorte throte', therefore, is not correct. — tendre: dainty ('leckerhaft').

L. 230 (518). Est, etc.: = in the east, etc.; cp. l. 108, n.

L. 231 (519). to-swyuke: to labour hard, to toil; the simple verb occurs l. 586.

L. 233 (521), sq. Paul: Cp. I. Cor. VI, 13., from where the Latin gloss in the margin found in a number of MSS. (E, Hen., Dd., Ch., In., Ad.¹; Bo.²; Har.⁴, Ash.²; Ad.²; Co., Te.²; Lin.) is taken. Sk. remarks that the usual reading of the Vulgate is 'has' for 'illam.' Cp. III, 445. Luther has, 'Die Speise dem Bauch, und der Bauch der Speise; aber Gott wird diesen und jene hinrichten'. — kanstow: for 'canst thou'; on this contraction s. ten Brink §§ 105β and 250, n. 2, and cp. ll. 264, 430, 431.

L. 236 (524) foul: filthy, vile, ugly, etc.; 'schmutzig' (H.); 'widerlich' (l. 264).

L. 238 (526) white and rede: sc. wine.; Sk. refers to C. T., B 4032 (Nuns' Priest's T.), and Piers Plowman, B Prol. 228. See also l. 274 below.

L. 239 (527) pryuee: privy; 'Abtritt' (H.); cp. Hieron. c. Jovin., l. c. 'guttur nostrum meditatorium efficitur latrinarum.' (Sk.).

L. 241 (529) read: Thapostle (s. l. 159). — The Latin gloss (found in E., Hen., Dd., Ch.; Bo.²; Hat.; Har.⁴, Ash.²) refers to Phil. III, 18–19. Luther's translation runs, 'Denn viele wandeln, von welchen ich euch oft gesagt habe, nun aber sage ich euch mit Weinen, die Feinde des Kreuzes Christi, welcher Ende ist die Verdammnis, welchen der Bauch ihr Gott ist, etc.' — Cp. also Pers. T. (l. 819–20), "Looke eek | what seith seint Paul of Glotonye. Manye seith seint Paul goon | of whiche I haue ofte seyde to yow and now I seye it. wepyng | that been the enemys of the croys of Christ of whiche the ende is deeth, and of whiche hire wombe is hire god and hire glorie, etc."

L. 244 (532). That been, though only found in a few MSS. not of the first order, is the only possible reading, as it is also seen in the above quotation from the Pers. T. The first unaccented syllable, of course, is dropped; cp. l. 75, n., and Freudenberger, p. 58. The common mistake in the majority of

MSS. may be accounted for by assuming that the first word was not written very distinctly, and that the different scribes either copied literally their originals, or tried to substitute a word better suiting the context.

L. 246 (534). bely^o to be slurred; cf. l. 10. — cod: bag. — Cp. Innoc., l. c., II, 18. 'Quanto sunt delicatoria cibaria, tanto foetidiora sunt stercora. Turpius egerit, qui turpiter ingerit, superius et inferius horribilem flatum exprimens, et abominabilem sonum emittens'. (Sk. III, 445). The similarity of a passage quoted by Sk. from Joh. Salisb. (Polycr. VIII, 6) with Chaucer's lines is not so striking.

L. 247 (535) corruptioun: putrefaction; 'Verwesung' (H.); it has here four syllables; s. ten Brink, § 268.

L. 249 (537) fynde: to supply, to provide for; the same, familiarly, in Mod. Engl.; Tw. refers to 'ver. 14835', i. e. C. T., B 4019 (Nuns Priest's T.), where this verb has the same meaning. S. also B 243 (Man of Law's T.).

L. 250 (538). Thise cookes: those cooks, not referring here, as usual, to a person or thing just named, but expressing the vivid imagination of an object not at the moment in the presence of the speaker. S. Mätzner, II, 2, 233 sq. The same signification frequently occurs in Chaucer; s. ll. 5, 35, 397, 404, 463. — For the contents of this passage, cp. again Innocent's treatise (II, cap. 17) 'Quaeruntur pigmenta, comparantur aromata . . . quae studiose coquantur arte coquorum . . . Alius contundit et colat, alius confundit et conficit, substanciam conuertit in accidens . . . ut fastidium reuocet appetitum, ad irritandum gulam' (Sk. III, 445). — Mr. Jephson (Bell III, 76) finds in l. 252 'an allusion to the philosophy of the Realists, according to which everything is supposed to have a substance distinct from the accidents of form, taste, colour, smell, &c.; so that, while the accidents remain, the substance may be changed, and vice versâ. The cook is said to change the nature and appearance so utterly, that the substance and accidents are confounded, etc.' Cp. also Sk.'s Note, V, 279.

L. 252 (540) fulfille: the -n found in E. and a few other MSS. must be dropped here for metrical reasons; cf. l. 114, n.

— likerous: dainty, gluttonous; 'leckerhaft, gierig' — talent: desire, appetite; 'Begehren' (H.).

L. 254 (542) noght: here used substantively = nothing, naught; s. l. 575. — mary: marrow.

L. 255 (543) golet: gullet, throat. — swoote: adv., sweetly; many MSS. have sote, which form occasionally occurs in E.; besides, Chaucer uses sweete, but, as it appears, only as an adjective; from this adj. the adverb sweetly, swetely is formed; quotations s. Sk., Gl. Ind.

L. 256 (544) spicerie: spices; cf. Germ. 'Spezerei' (H.).

L. 257 (545) his: whose?; cp. next l. hym and l. 58 hem, also used without a reference to a certain noun; cooke, which might be supplied, occurs in the plural l. 250 sqq. — ymaked: cp. l. 94, n. — by delit: for (or according to) his pleasure; cp. Einkenel, l. c. 128 sq.

L. 259 (547) haunteth: practises, indulges in (Sk.); 'ergeben' (H.); s. l. 176; delice: delight, pleasure; 'Üppigkeit' (H.). — The Latin gloss in the margin found in E., Hen., Dd., Ch.; Bo.²; Ash.²; Ad.², Hat.; Lin., is taken from 1. Tim. V, 6., where the Vulgate, however, has Quae and mortua (Sk.). Luther says, accordingly, 'Welche aber in Wollüsten lebet, die ist lebendig tot'.

L. 260 (548) tho: those, plur. of that.

L. 261 (549). This Latin gloss (in the same MSS., except Ad.²) is from the Vulgate version of Proverbs XX, 1. But, as Sk. remarks, it has 'tumultuosa' for 'contumeliosa', which latter is found in St. Jerome's Contr. Jov. II, 10 according to Köppel. — 'Der Wein macht lose Leute, und stark Getränk macht wild, etc.' Luther. — lecherous: lustful, libidinous; 'lüstern' (H.).

L. 262 (550) stryuyng: strife, quarrelsomeness; Streitsucht.

L. 263 (551) Cp. Innocent, l. c. II, 19: 'Quid turpius ebrioso? cui fetor in ore . . cui facies transformatur?' (Sk. III, 445).

L. 264 (552) our: cf. H 32 (Manciple's Prol.). — artow: s. l. 233, n.

L. 265 (553) sq.: 'the drunkard's stertorous breathing seems to repeat the sound of the word 'Sampsoún' (Sk.). — Cf. 'he speketh in his nose', H 61.

L. 267 (555) woot: s. l. 24, n. — For the double negation, s. l. 95. — neuere: here a monosyllable, but if to be pronounced ne'er, as at present is doubtful; cf. ten Brink, § 263; Kittredge, p. 207, and s. l. 309 below. Perhaps also no, wanting in several MSS., may be omitted here. — Sk. observes that the command to drink no wine, in Judges XIII. 4. 7, is addressed not to Samson, but to his mother; see, however, v. 14 ib., where the same command is applied to him.

L. 268 (556) a styked swyn: a stuck pig; the introduction of the various readings may be explained by assuming that their authors meant to use here a more powerful or a more appropriate expression. Cp. H 40 (Manciple's Prol.), where we find 'stynkyng swyn'.

L. 269 (557) honeste cure: care for honorable or decent things; cf. l. 40; 'Anstandssinn' (H.).

L. 270 (558) sepulture: burial; cf. Pers. T., l. c., '. . . dronkenesse . . . is the horrible sepulture of mannes resoun'.

L. 272 (560) drynke ought to be drynk (drinc), but as the form with the weak -e occurs also in ryme (s. A 345 and Leg. G. W., 2040), I have not altered it here; cf. l. 64, n. A similar passage occurs H 57 (Manciple's Prol.).

L. 273 (561). conseil: a secret; cp. l. 531; Sk. refers to Chaucer's Tale of Melibeus (B 2383): '. . . folk that ben dronkelewe . . . ne can no conseil hyde; for Salomon seith, Ther is no privetee ther-as regneth dronkenesse'. For the first part of this quotation cf. C. T., B 776—7 (Man of Lawe's Tale), for the latter, Proverbs XXXI, 4, where the Vulgate has: '. . . nullum secretum est ubi regnat ebrietas' (not in the English version, nor in Luther's). S. also Innocent's Treatise, l. c. (Sk. III, 445). — drede: s. l. 219.

L. 275 (563) namely: s. l. 114, n. — Lepe: Tyrwhitt has the following note: 'According to the Geographers, Lepe was not far from Cadiz. This wine . . . was probably much stronger than the Gascon wines, usually drunk in England'. — He then quotes an order of the Royal Household of the year 1604, alluding to the greater rarity of Spanish wines at that period. Sk. also refers to some regulations to be observed by London vintners, mentioned in the Liber Albus, ed. Riley, pp. 614—18; among others, 'that white wine of Gascoigne, of la Rochele, of Spain, or other places, shall not be put in cellars with Rhenish wines' etc. (V, 280; partly repeated on the next page).

L. 276 (564) to selle: Sk. observes that this gerund is the correct old idiom, for the more modern 'to be sold'. — ffysch-strete: leads out of Lower Thames Street (Chaucer's own father was a vintner of Thames Street), close to the North end of London Bridge. The names of other streets found in a few MSS. may be gratuitous alterations introduced by their scribes to denote a place better known for its wine at their own time; perhaps also flete strete in Phy. and Har.⁴ may be due to a misreading of their respective copyists not very well acquainted with London (both MSS. show traces of some provincial dialect), who remembered this name, but had not heard of the other. — Chepe: now Cheapside, a street in the City of London: as a place where wine was sold it is also mentioned H 24 (Manicule's Prol.).

L. 277 (565). crepeth subtilly: finds its way mysteriously (Sk.); 'schleicht heimlich' (H.). Skeat thinks that this line and the next form an ironical suggestion of the poet's that the London vintners excused their having mixed this Spanish wine with those of Gascony by pretending that this mixture was the consequence of their growing so near each other.

L. 278 (566) faste: adv., close.

L. 279 (567) fumosite: fumes arising from drunkenness (Sk.); 'Dunst' (H.).

L. 280 (568) draughtes thre: When the numeral follows the substantive, the latter is usually in the genitive. Cp. Ein-enkel, p. 15, and see l. 583.

L. 281 sqq. (569): The drunken man does not exactly know where he is. — Observe the use of the subjunctive in oblique speech (Koch II; § 585; Mätzner II, 1, 117 sq.), and s. ll. 393, 401, 661.

L. 283 (571) the Rochelle: La Rochelle; the wines growing there and near Bordeaux are weaker than the Spanish wines.

L. 284 (572): s. l. 265.

L. 285 (573) lordynges being the Pardoner's usual way of addressing his hearers, I have altered the isolated reading of E. (s. ll. 41 & 166).

L. 286 (574) souereyn Actes: most important (great) deeds; 'grosse That' (H.).

L. 287 (575) read: victôr^oyes in th'old: cp. ll. 10, n., & 99, n.

L. 290 (578) Looketh: search ye (Sk., Gl. Ind.); 'lest . . . nach' (H.). — may: s. l. 8, n. — leere: s. l. 37, n.

L. 291 (579) Attila: Mr. Jephson quotes the account give by Paulus Diaconus in his Gestis Roman. lib. XV.: Sk. refers also to Jornandes, de Rebus Geticis, § 82; from our poet's short allusion to the death of this 'grete Conquerour' (which took place A. D. 453), it cannot be decided which of these authorities he followed. Both agree that Attila died on the night of his marriage with a beautiful maiden by the bursting of a blood-vessel, in consequence of his having indulged in too liberal a potation at the carousal held in honour of this festivity.

L. 292 (580) deyde: pret. of deye(n), dye(n); a number of MSS. have dyde, died, etc., which forms are also secured by rymes; s. ten Brink, § 176, and l. 370.

L. 293 (581) ay: usually; cf. . . . 'eruptione sanguinis, qui ei de naribus solitus erat effluere' (Paul. Diac., l. c.) and . . . 'sanguis, qui ei solitè de naribus effluebat' (Jorn., l. c.).

L. 294 (582) Capitayn: general, captain. — sobrenesse: sobriety.

L. 295 (583) read: ôvr'al this; above, etc.; cp. l. 180, n. — auyseth yow: consider, observe; yow: reflexive pron.; s. l. 42, n.

L. 296 (584) sqq. Lamuel: v. Proverbs XXXI, 14, from which the Latin gloss in the margin (s. E., Hen., Dd., Ch., Hod.; Ash.²; Bo.²; Se.; Pe., Del., Har.², Lich., Ph.³) is also taken (cf. Tw., Sk., etc.). The English version runs, 'It is not for kings, Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink (5) Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment, etc.'

L. 298 (586) fynde: cf. l. 174. — Supply.: 'written'.

L. 299 (587) wyn yeuyng may be considered as a compound word; so Glo. Ed. has a hyphen between the two words; cf. Einenkel, p. 270. — han: administer.

L. 301 (589). The insertion of that and the alteration of spoken in to spoke are required by the metre (cf. l. 114, n.). The deviations in E. can only be errors of the scribe's.

L. 302 (590). deffenden: s. l. 222. — With this passage is to be compared Pers. T. 793 (to which Sk. refers); it runs, 'Now comth hasardrie with hise apurtenances . . of which comth deceite. false othes. chidynges. and alle raunynges. blasphemynge and reneyng of god, and hate of hise neighebores. wast of goodes. mysspendynge of tyme. and somtyme man slaughtre.'

L. 303 (591) Hasard: s. l. 177. — The quotation in the margin (found in E., Hen., Dd.,*) Ch., In., Ad.¹; Bo.²; Ash.²; Se., Hat., Ad.²; Pe., Del., Har.², Lau.¹, Lich., Ph.³, Ash.⁴) refers to the 'Polycraticus' of John of Salisbury (s. Introduct., p. XXVII) where it is in the fifth chapter of book I. Cp. Morley's English Writers, III, 180; s. also Ayenbite of Inwyte, ed. Morris pp. 45, 46 (Sk.). — lesynge: falsehood, lie; 'Lug' (Sk. H.).

L. 304 (592) forswerynge: perjury; 'Meineid' (H.).

L. 305 (593) Blaspheme must be substituted for Blasphemynng in E. and the Dd.-group, because of the metre. — wast: waste; 'Verschwendung' (H.).

L. 306 (594) catel: chattel, goods.

L. 307 (595) repreue: reproof, reproach, shame; cp. l. 344, — contrarie is subst. here (contradiction; opposite), and so of, as in E., etc., is the right reading; pron. cóntrary'óf (l. 10, n.).

L. 308 (596) commun, is here the indefinite form of the adjective, and so the final -e found in E. and other MSS. must be suppressed; it has here the sense of 'professional'; 'Spieler von Profession' (H.).

L. 309 (597) euer is here treated as a monosyllable; cf. l. 267, n. — estaat: condition, rank; 'Stellung' (H.).

*) Dd., Ch., perhaps also Ad.¹, have 'Polliorum' f. 'Policratici', Bo.², Se., Hat. 'Politicorum', Ad.² 'Polica'.

L. 310 (598) yholden, though only found in few MSS., is the form required here by the metre; cf. l. 314. Or, perhaps, we may read, according to other MSS., The moore he is holden, etc., where the weak e of moore might be sounded before h. — desolaat: shunned (Sk.); 'ehrlös' (H.).

L. 311 (599) vseth hasardrye: plays at hazard, is given to gambling; cp. l. 336. — Though a great number of MSS. have the subjunctive here, the indicative found in E. and others need not be altered, as this mood is frequent in conditional clauses in Early Engl.; s. l. 128 above, and cp. Koch II, § 53; Mätzner II, I, p. 122. The subjunctive is found 90, 366, 453 (but), 472, 552. — As for the metre, either hiatus must be admitted after prynce, or, as this liberty is very rarely made use of by Chaucer (s. ten Brink, § 270, 3; Kittredge, § 126), a weak e may perhaps be inserted into hasárd(e)rye (so spelt in Gg.). See also ll. 484, and cp. ten Brink, § 262.

L. 312 (600) gouvernaunce: rule, government.

L. 313 (601) as by: as regards, according to; cf. ll. 331 & 357.

L. 315 (603) Stilbon: ought to be 'Chilon'; Tyrwhitt quotes as the source from which Chaucer took this passage, Joh. Salisb., Polycrat. lib. I, cap. V (cf. above l. 303) 'Chilon Lacedaemonius, jungendae societatis causâ missus Corinthum, duces et seniores populi invenit in aleâ. Infecto itaque negotio reversus est.' S. also 'Additions'. — As for the gloss 'i. e. Mercurius' found in Pe. and a few MSS. of this group, Sk. observes that this refers to the planet 'Mercurius', which was called στύβωρ, shining, glittering. The authors from whom this appellation (scarcely Chaucer's own idea) may have been derived are likewise quoted by Sk.

L. 317 (605) Pronounce: Lácidóm²ye, tó mak' hír, etc.; the same accentuation of 'Lacedomye' s. F 1380 (Frankl.'s Tale).

L. 318 (606) háppedè, happened, though only found in few MSS., among which is not E., must have its final -e on account of the metre. So. Sk.; cp. Freudenberger, p. 49. — S. also l. 597. — par chaunce: by chance; cp. the same l.

L. 319 (607) Though the final -e in gretteste ('Die ersten Männer'; H.) is mute here, there was no necessity for suppressing it, as Sk. does.

L. 320 (608). Read; Pléyyng' átte hársard, etc., another nine-syllable line; s. l. 75, and cp. Freudenberger, p. 15. Tyrwhitt's emendation 'Yplaying' is impossible, and as unnecessary as Hertzberg's suggestion In playing. — Atte for at the is a common assimilation of consonants: (cf. ten Brink, § 105, β); s. l. 556.

L. 321 (609) may also be treated as a nine-syllable verse, though its scansion is rather awkward then; still more doubtful appears to me the admission of hiatus between sóone and ás (s. ll. 311 & 484). But perhaps that, which some MSS. have after as, (a greater number instead of it;) might be inserted here. F 615 (Squire's Tale), we read anon as that (E., Hen., Co., Pe., Lan.), and as anon has frequently the same meaning as some (cf. Koch, Gram. II, § 498; Mätzner, Gram. II, 2, 440), that may have been the original reading, but dropped, as apparently superfluous and unusual, by most MSS. For those in which it is found, though derived from a source worse than E., Dd., etc., show in several places the influence of a text belonging to the last named group. Cp. Introd. pp. XXXXIII & LI.

L. 323 (611) lese: to lose.

L. 324 (612). Pronounce N'I (cf. ten Brink, § 270, Ann.). — defame: dishonour; 'Schande' (H.); the verb s. l. 127.

L. 325 (613) Pronounce: t'allie; cf. ten Brink, § 269, Kittredge, § 130, and s. also l. 645. — none: for the frequent use of the double negation, s. l. 95, n.

L. 326 (614). Cp. l. 75, n., and Freudenberger, p. 67; som, which Tyrwhitt and after him, Wright and Bell insert after Sendeth, is neither sufficiently warranted by the MSS., nor does it materially improve the sense of this passage. For other wise, which most MSS. have, seems to me contradictory to what was said before; because ambassadors that ally a country with another governed by gamblers cannot be called 'wise'; so I take otherwise to mean 'another sort of, etc.:'; 'andere Unterhändler' (H.).

L. 327 (615) me were leuere (why does Sk. alter the latter into lever?): I had rather, I had as lief, etc.; for this construction s. Einenkel, pp. 112, 230, etc.

L. 330 (618) Shul: s. note to l. 477. — hasardour: gamester, gambler.; s. l. 463.

L. 331 (619). As by: s. l. 313, n. — tretee: treaty.

L. 333 (621). Demetrius: probably Demetrius Nicator, king of Syria, who died in 126 B. C. He was in war with the Parthians, who defeated him, and took him prisoner in 138. Hertzberg refers to Justinus XXXVI, 1.

L. 334 (622): the book: Johannes Salisb., l. c. (cf. l. 315) 'Regi quoque Demetrio, in opprobrium puerilis leuitatis, tali aurei a rege Parthorum dati sunt' (s. Sk.). — Mr. Jephson finds a similarity in the situation described here and that in Shakspeare's Henry V., Act I, sc. 2.

L. 335 (623) him: a (pleonastic) repetition of 'to the kyng D.' in l. 333. — The reading 'a paire dees' found in a few MSS. may have been the original one; cf. l. 339 below. The final e of paire would then, of course, be sounded. — dees: s. l. 179.

L. 336 (624) used: s. l. 311 ('fröhnen' H). — ther bifore: before that time; 'früher' (H.)

L. 337 (625) Read: glory'or: s. ll. 10 n. & 123.

L. 338 (626) (heeld) At no value, &c.: thought (made) little of, etc.

L. 339 (627) maner play: sort of play; after maner, originally a Fr. substantive (manière), the preposition 'of' is frequently dropped by Chaucer and other poets of his time; s. Koch, Gram. II, § 229; cf. Einkenel pp. 93, 94, and l. 335, n.

L. 340 (628). Honeste: s. l. 40. — to dryue the day away: to pass the time (cf. Sk.'s note); 'die Zeit vertreiben' (H.).

L. 341 (629) othes false and grete: 'schwere, falsche Eide.' (H.).

L. 342 (630) olde bookes: among them the Bible (s. ll. 346 & 347), and, as Sk. observes, Frère Lorens's 'Somme des Vices et des Vertues', for the most part the source of the 'Persones Tale', with which the passage before us has several agreements (s. l. 587 sqq. and Introduct., p. XXVII, but cp. also 'Additions'). — trete to treat of, to relate.

L. 344 (632) repreuable; reprehensible; cp. l. 307.

L. 345 (633) The Latin quotation in the margin (s. E., Hen., Dd., Ch., In.; Bo.²; Ash.²; Se., Hat.; Ad.²; Te.²; Pe., Del., Har.², Lich., Lin., Ph.³) is from Matt. V. 34; according to the Vulgate, the passage runs, 'Ego autem dico uobis, non iurare omnino, neque per caelum, quia thronus Dei est'. (Sk.).

L. 346 (634) Witnesse on M.: take the example of M. (Sk., Gl. Ind.); cf. D 951 (Wife of Bath's T.) and D 1491 (Friar's T.); according to Sk., 'witnesse' is the imperative; but cf. Einenkel, p. 64 sq., who compares this expression with the O. Fr. 'tesmoin'.

L. 347 (635) Jeremye: IV, 2. The Latin quotation in the margin is also found in all the above mentioned MSS., except Ad.²; add, however, Lau.¹

L. 348 (636) swere must be, according to the Latin text, the right word, though E. and Har.⁴ (the same Sk. and Glo. Ed.) have seye instead, which may have crept in here from l. 347, or presented itself to the scribes in question as a very common phrase (seye soothe). Cp. also Pers. T., l. c. 592, 'Thou shalt swere in trouthe | and in rightwisnesse.' Sk. quotes also the corresponding passage from Wyclif (ed. Arnold, III, 483).

L. 351 (639) that, beginning a subordinate clause, seems rather curious here, as it is repeated again l. 353 by Hou that. But this construction is not uncommon in Early Engl., when the subordinate clause is interrupted by another, or by an adverbial phrase immediately following such a that. Cf. Mätzner, II, 2, 403 sq.; see also notes to ll. 8 and 151, and cp. C. T., A 4180—82 (Reeve's T.); B 2375 & 2393 (Melibeus), etc. — So per f. that found in Har.⁴ (the same in the edd. of Wr., B., & M.), though it at first sight seems preferable, is an unauthorized alteration. — firste table: the commandments that teach us our duty towards God (Sk.).

L. 353 (641) seconde heeste: formerly, the first two commandments were considered as one; the third commandment was therefore the second, as here (s. Sk.'s note, who also refers to Wyclif's treatise on the Ten Commandments [Works, III, 82], to Hampole's Prose Treatises, ed. Perry, p. 10, etc.).

L. 354 (642): a nine-syllable verse; s. l. 75, n. — Cp. also Pers. T., I 588 'Thow shalt nat take the name of thy lord god in veyn or in ydel'.

L. 355 (643) rather: sooner; because this commandment precedes those which relate to murder (Sk.).

L. 356 (644) homycide: manslaughter, murder; the same in ll. 369 and 608; but in l. 605 it means 'man-slayer, murderer'. — many a: thus the nearly isolated reading of E. must be altered according to several of the best MSS., for any would impute that the trespasses against God mentioned in the first two (or three) commandments were not to be considered 'cursed thyngs'.

L. 357 (645) as by ordre: according to the order, in succession; 'der Reihe nach' (H.); cf. ll. 313 & 331.

L. 358 (646) knoweth that: the addition of they in several MSS. and of he in Har.⁴ and modern Edd. (Tw., Wr., B., M.) before that is superfluous, as that alone frequently has the force of 'he who', 'they that' in Early Engl. (v. Mätzner II, 2, 533—4; ten Brink § 254), and they, etc. would somewhat spoil the metre. But it is doubtful whether knowe(n) in E. and some other MSS. is preferable (so in Sk. & Glo. Ed.), or knoweth, the reading found in most MSS. I have adopted the latter as more conformable with stondith and vnderstondeth, though the mixture of the terminations -en and -eth in the plural of the pres. indic. is not quite unheard of in Chaucer, the latter especially occurring with relation to the indefinite subject men, which might here be supplied. Cf. Kittredge, § 97, and s. ll. 130 and 387.

L. 360 (648) Read: ovr 'I (s. l. 180). — plat: flatly, straight out.

L. 361 (649). Cf. Pers. T. (I 593): ' . . . the wounde shal nat departe from his hous | whil he vseth | swich vnleueful sweryng.' Sk. quotes a similar passage in Wyclif's works (III, 84) also taken from Ecclesiasticus XXIII, 11.

L. 362 (650) outrageous: excessive, immoderate; is to outr. of, etc.: swears too excessively.

L. 363 (651) nayles: Tw. says 'i. e. with which he was nailed to the cross', quoting a passage from Maundeville (c. VII). Sk. is not quite satisfied with this explanation, as he finds there and in other places the 'nails' mentioned together with other 'members of Christ's body' (So in Wyclif, III, 483). He is therefore inclined to take this word as meaning the nails of his fingers and toes. But his citation, from a Latin MS. (in Lewis's Life of Pecoek) to the effect that, in 1420, many men died in England from bleeding in those parts of their bodies by which they had sworn, does not quite bear this out. For after enumerating Christ's face, eyes, sides, blood, and heart, this text mentions 'per clauos Christi in suis manibus et pedibus'. Had this author meant to convey the idea of fingernails, etc., he would have written 'per ungues', etc. But evidently he intended to designate the nail-marks in Christ's hands and feet. On the other hand, as there is in English as well as in German, only one word for the two different meanings, some confusion may have been created in the minds of swearers and their hearers, to whom the exact signification of the word used for their blasphemy was quite indifferent. Cf. also the oath of our 'sire ooste', l. 2, in which Christ's blood and his nails are mentioned together, i. e., as I understand it, the blood which ran from the wounds made by the nails driven through his hands and feet.

L. 364 (652) the blood . . . in Hayles: 'The Abbey of Hailes, in Gloucestershire, was founded by Richard, King of the Romans, brother to Henry III. This precious relick, which was afterwards called "the blood of Hailis" was brought out of Germany by the son of Richard, Edmund, who bestowed a third part of it upon his father's Abbey of Hailes, etc. Holinshed v. II. p. 275' (Tw.). Sk. adds that according to the Legend (cp. Horstmann's Altengl. Legenden, p. 275) the holy blood was obtained by Titus from Joseph of Arimathea. Titus put it in the Temple of Peace, in Rome, whence Charlemagne took half of it to Germany, where Edmund found it. As for the trick formerly employed to work the pretended miracle with this blood, s. ib., where also a number of other authorities are quoted.

L. 365 (653) chaunce: a certain throw in the game called 'hasard' (s. ll. 177, 303, 320). When the caster is going to throw he names one of the numbers five, six, seven, eight, or nine ('calls a main'); most often, he calls seven. If he then throws either seven or eleven, he wins; if he throws aces, or deuce-ace (two and one), or double sixes, he loses. If he throws some other number, that number is called the caster's chance, and he goes on playing till either the 'main' or the 'chance' turns up. In the first case he loses, in the second, he wins, etc. Cp. Skeat's note to C. T.. B 124 (Man of Lawe's Prol.). — cynk and treye: from O. Fr. cinc and trei, troi, likewise gamesters' expressions for five and three, still used as 'cinque' and 'tray' (in tray-trip, Webster) or 'trey' in different games of more modern times. — The -e in treye is, of course, inorganic.

L. 368 (656) bicched: according to Sk., the meaning of this word is 'cursed, execrable', derived from 'bitch' in its opprobrious sense (a reproach for a woman), as it seems. If this sense should be the right one here, the word is perhaps related to the provincial German word 'bick' = verres castratus (s. Grimm's Wörterbuch, s. v.). — But Tw. alters 'bicched' into 'bicchel', the meaning of which is 'talus' (cf. Grimm, l. c., and Schade, Altddeutsches Wörterbuch, 'bickel', 'bickelspiel' = knuckle, ankle, dice, &c.), which appears to suit here very well, though the changing of d into l is quite unauthorized. — So Wr. and Sk. reject Tw.'s explanation, referring to a passage in the Towneley Mysteries (p. 241), where we read,

*I was falsly begyled withe thine byched bones,
Ther cursyd thay be'.*

From the latter words, however, it follows, in my opinion, that 'byched' cannot mean here 'cursed'. As several MSS. (s. various readings) have substituted here some other word, 'bicked' seems not to have been in general use, probably not being a genuine English word, but imported from the continent, so that Tw.'s suggestion, though phonologically unsatisfactory, may after all point to the right direction from where this word came. At any rate, I think its meaning must have something to do with the game in question, as in both passages where it is found it is connected with the word 'bones', both together expressing the same sense as the word 'dice' (So Sk. in his Gl. Ind.). 'Die zwei Knöchel.' (H.)

L. 369 (657). Ire: anger; 'Jähzorn' (H.). — homycide: s. ll. 356 and 605.

L. 371 (659) Lete: Tw. has Leteth, Wr., B., M., Sk., Glo. Ed. have Leveth. But I see no necessity for altering the reading of E. and some other MSS.; for lete is here used as an independent verb, and has the meaning of 'give up, leave off,' etc.; s. l. 443 and the numerous quotations in Sk.'s Gl. Ind. And even if Lete must be pronounced as a monosyllable (v. ten Brink, § 189, and cp. ll. 622 & 637 below), this would not be against Chaucer's metrical rules, as we should have here one of those nine-syllable lines mentioned before l. 75, etc. — The form lat(e) is always used with an infinitive. Cp. Kittredge, p. 278, and s. ll. 36, 80, 409, 506, 595, 659, 666.

L. 373 (661) Riotoures: roisterers, toppers, drunkards; the metre requires here the complete termination of the plural -es, though this form is only found in a few MSS.; cp. ll. 428 and 480.

L. 374 (662) erst er: first before; e(er) is an old comparative, erst its superlative (s. ten Brink § 246, n., and cp. the German erst[er]), which began to grow obsolete; s. the various readings. — prime: an expression not easily explained; cf. Hertzberg's long note to line 2191 (Kn. T.), Jephson's (Bell's ed. I, 218) and Skeat's to l. 3906 (Reeve's Prol.). It generally means the time between 6 and 9 o'clock in the morning; but here it designates the canonical hour for prayer so called, to announce which bells were rung. (Sk.). — of: from; in Early Engl. frequently used in this local sense; s. l. 648, and. cp. Mätzner II, 1, 223.

L. 375 (663) hem: s. l. 42, n. — A number of MSS. of different groups insert for before to drynke, which recommends itself on account of the metre, and has been adopted by all Edd. But as the verse may also be treated as a nine-syllable one, I have kept the reading of E. and the majority of MSS.

L. 376 (664) a belle: a hand-bell was carried before a corpse at a funeral by the sexton (s. Sk., who quotes some authorities).

L. 377 (665) cors: corpse; cp. l. 16, n. — was caried &c.: a relative clause; cp. Mätzner, II, 2, 528; Koch, II, § 362.

L. 378 (666) That oon: also spelt the toon: (the) one (of them); cp. n. ll. 514 & 519. — gan callen: cp. l. 1, note. — knaue: page, servant-lad, boy.

L. 379 (667) Go bet: Sk. gives as its literal translation 'go quicker'; in his Gl. Ind., however, 'go as quickly as possible'; cp. also the German 'fürbass gehen', MHG. vürbaz = moore forward, further, etc. — That this phrase was also used as a hunting cry, has been pointed out by Tw. (who quotes L.G.W., Dido l. 288) and Halliwell (cited by Sk.). — redily: quickly, at once.

L. 381 (669) reporte: s. l. 150; here subjunctive; cp. l. 538/39.

L. 382 (670) neueradecl (pr. névr'adéel; cp. l. 180) not a bit, not at all; 'dess bedarf es nicht.' H.

L. 383 (671) twoo houres: for this adverbial accusative s. Einenkel, l. c., p. 55.

L. 384 (672) pardee: Fr. par dieu, an oath frequently used by Chaucer; s. Sk., Gl. Ind.; also written par dieux, pardy, etc.

L. 385 (673) After this verse, Wr., B., and M. put a semicolon, and a comma at the end of the next; on the whole, this punctuation makes no material difference in the sense of the passage.

L. 386 (674) ffor-dronke: extremely drunk (Sk.).

L. 387 (675) priue: secret (Sk.). — theef: 'Schächter' (H.). — Clepeth: though only found in a few MSS., besides E., I have not thought it necessary to alter this form into clepen, as all other Edd. do; cp. note to l. 358, and s. l. 130, n.

L. 389 (677) sperre: spear; as a mortal weapon in an allegorical sense also mentioned Parl. of F., l. 135. — smoot atwo broke in two, pierced.

L. 390 (678) mo, originally a noun neuter, is frequently used as an adjective in the 'Plural by Chaucer; cf. ten Brink, § 246; Kittredge, l. c., p. 137, where the frequent occurrence of mo just in the formula in question is mentioned. — Cp. l. 603.

L. 391 (679) this pestilence: during this plague; on this peculiar use of the adverbial accusative s. Einenkel, l. c., p. 53; cf. Mätzner, l. c., II, 1, 164; s. also ll. 89 and 444, n. — As for the event in question, Sk. mentions four plagues that took place in the reign of Edward III. in 1348—9, 1361—2, 1369, 1375—6. If Chaucer took also these details from his supposed Italian source (s. Introduction, ch. IV.), it must be the first plague to which this passage alludes, as it had spread nearly over all Europe.

L. 393 (681) were: s. l. 281, n.

L. 394 (682) to be war of: to beware of, to take care of; 'auf der Hut . . sein' (H.).

L. 395 (683) eueremore: continually; 'stets' (H.).

L. 396 (684) dame: mother (s. the reading of To.); cf. C. T., H 317 (Manciple's Tale), where the same phrase occurs. — I restore the correct form seye, though the final-e is mute here, and only few MSS. have it; s. l. 443, and cp. Kittredge, l. c., § 92. — seinte: the final is to be sounded here; s. l. 20, n.

L. 397 (685) this Tauerner: cp. note to l. 250.

L. 399 (687) Henne: hence, from here; OE. heonan, etc., Germ. 'hinnen'. That this older form was really used by Chaucer is shown by several rymes; s. C. T., A 3889/90 (Miller-Reeve-Link); Troilus II. 209/10; III, 629/30; IV, 1245/46. Most MSS., however, have the later form hennes, hens, etc.

L. 400 (688) hyne: hind, servant, domestic (Sk.); O. E. hīna (?). — page: cp. note, to l. 161.

L. 401 (689) I trowe: s. l. 151, n. — be: s. l. 281, n.

L. 402 (690) auysed: careful, wary, etc.; cf. l. 295.

L. 403 (691) dide . . a dishonour: to bring shame on a person, to, treat one badly; 'Schmach anthun' (H.).

L. 404 (692). Ye: yea, verily; even (l. 657). — Goddess armes: cp. l. 366.

L. 406 (694) by wey: the preposition by has here the meaning of 'along'; cp. Einkenkel, l. c., p. 125—6. — The same phrase occurs Wright, Pop. Treat. p. 136 (Mätzner II, 1, 393).

L. 407 (695) auow, not a vow, as Sk. observes; the latter being a later form of the word, at least not as usual as the former in earlier times. — The preposition to, for which a great number of MSS. have by, looks rather strange here; but it seems to have the same sense as it has after such verbs as preien, hopen, crien, etc., though then the person is named to whom one prays, etc. Cp. Hous of Fame, l. 1706, & cp. Mätzner, l. c., II, 1, 282; Einkenel, l. c., 204; cf. the German phrase 'Ich gelobe zu Gott' etc. — digne: worthy, honorable.

L. 408 (696) ones: adv., now 'once', here = united, of one mind (Sk.); 'einig' (H.)

L. 409 (697) holde vp: to lift; Mr. Jephson has here the note, 'This is still the ceremony used in taking an oath in courts of justice in Prussia'. — til: though only found in few MSS., seems to be the right form here, as it is generally used before vowels. to before consonants (s. Sk. VI, p. LXXXII).

L. 410 (698) brother: sworn friend. — Mr. Jephson refers here to a note to the Knightes Tale (Bell II, 124), i. e to A, 1131, in which he says, 'Formal compacts for the purpose of mutual counsel and assistance in love and war were common to the heroic and chivalrous ages', after which he enumerates a number of well-known ancient heroes connected by intimate friendship.

L. 412 (700) he that, etc.; which for he, the isolated reading of E., which Sk. adopts (Tw. and Glo. Ed. have he) seems to me less powerful and expressive than the former, and though it is grammatically correct, I have preferred here to follow a number of other MSS. as the evidence of these, belonging to different groups, seems to me sufficient for this purpose. Cp. besides l. 488. — Wr., B., and M. drop either word.

L. 414 (702) hir trouthes plight: plighted their troth, pledged their word; plight is the contracted form of the part. past; cp. ten Brink, § 170.

L. 415 (703) for is, no doubt, the right word, though a good many MSS. and several editors (Wr., Be., M.) have with for it; for, it is to be understood. those men had sworn to sacrifice their lives for each other, if need be, not to die all together.

L. 416 (704) ybore: I have inserted this form though it only occurs in Hen., Dd., and Hai; at any rate, the inflected form of the participle is required here by grammar as well as by metre; perhaps it ought to be yborne; perhaps, also, borne, but then ou(e)ne must be pronounced as a dissyllable. In ryme, the two forms (y)born (s. C. T., A 4109: scorn) and (y)bore (s. C. T., A 1542: more, C 215: wherefore) are proved to exist; but as the form in question is only possible before a noun, it can scarcely be expected to appear in ryme. — Sk. has. yboren, without any authority, Gl. Ed. ybore, Tw. boren; Wr. sworne, according to Har.⁴, which he thinks better than Tyrwhitt's (!). But Mr. Jephson follows Tw., because, as he rightly remarks, they were already 'sworn' brothers; whilst M. adopts Wr.'s reading.

L. 417 (705) stirte: pret., started, rushed; perhaps the form sterte (so Sk.) deserves the preference, as it is the only one secured by rymes (s. ten Brink, § 176; Kittredge, l. c., p. 241). Still, as there are so many double forms in Chaucer, I thought an alteration unnecessary. Tw. has stert, Gl. Ed. stirte; Wr., B., M., startyn, according to Har.⁴ — and dronken: and (they) drank, etc.; a great number of MSS., and so the Edd., except Sk., have al dronken = quite drunk; both readings are possible, and so it is doubtful which is the genuine one. But as the expression found in E. is supported by several MSS. of different groups (Ch., Gg., Bo.², Hat., Pe., etc.), I have left it unaltered.

L. 420 (708) grisly: s. l. 185.

L. 421 (709) to-rente: tore in pieces; cf. note to l. 186/87.

L. 422 (710) hente: to catch, seize; part. p. yhent; s. l. 580. — We, which some MSS. and Tw. have for they (and accordingly H.: 'wenn wir ihn fassen'), is scarcely admissible, as the indication, usual with Chaucer, stating who are the speakers, is wanting.

L. 423 (711) half, om. by a number of MSS. (also by Wr. and B.) is required by the metre.

L. 424 (712) wolde han troden: were going to step: stile: 'Feldstiege'.

L. 425 (713) 'An oold man': answers to the 'romito' or hermit of the Italian tale. (s. Sk., who also calls the reader's attention to the indefinite form of old in this l., and the definite one in the next. Cp. ten Brink, § 234—5). — S. also l. 441, n.

- L. 426 (714) grette: greeted, pret.; cf. ten Brink, § 170 a.
- L. 427 (715) god yow see: may God keep you in his sight (Tw., who also quotes two other passages of the C. T. — now B 156 & D 2169 — where the same phrase occurs). Sk. adds a few more references.
- L. 428 (716) proudeste: the most overbearing, insolent; 'frechste' (H.). — Cf. l. 42, 488, n., and 611 (pride). — Riotoures: cf. ll. 373 and 480.

L. 429 (717) curl: man, fellow, of Old Norse origin; the genuine Engl. form cherl, charle (O. E. ceorl), which is here also found in several MSS., has generally a more despicable meaning: churl, boor, rascal, etc.; s. l. 3 (note) and l. 462. — with sory grace: ill-looking, ill-favored, ugly; here said of the external appearance; l. 588, however it is used in a moral sense: infamous, disgraceful.

L. 430 (718) artow = art thou; lyuestow = lyuest thou; cf. l. 233, n. — forwrapped: wrapped up.

L. 432 (720) gan looke: s. l. 1.

L. 433 (721) for: conjunction = because.

L. 434 (722) Ynde: here and in other places used to designate some distant country; s. C. T., D. 824 (Wife of B.); Book of the Duch. 888; Troil. V, 971.

L. 435 (723) ne: I have inserted this negation instead of nor in E. and few other MSS., assuming it as more likely that this older form was in the original than that so great a number of scribes should have introduced it more or less independently of each other. Cf. l. 51 and Mätzner II, 2, 352.

L. 439 (727). Sk. remarks: 'This is a great improvement upon the Italian tale, which represents the hermit as fleeing from death'.

L. 440 (728) kaityf: O. Fr. caitif, orig. captive; wretch. = restelees caityf: 'rastlos, jammervoll und schwach' (H.).

L. 441 (729) sqq. According to the discovery of Professor Kittredge, this passage is imitated from the first Elegy of Maximian, especially ll. 223—8 (s. Sk.'s note to l. 727), which run:

Hinc est quod baculo incumbens ruitura senectus
Assiduo pigram uerbere pulsat humum.

Et numerosa mouens certo uestigia passu

Talia rugato creditur ore loqui:

“Suscipe me, genetrix, nati miserere laborum,

Membra uelis gremio fessa fouere tuo.”

Sk. adds: Cf. Calderon, Les tres Justicias en Una; Act II. sc. 1. — Ten Brink (Gesch. d. Engl. Lit., II, 178) finds a striking similarity between this mysterious old man and the Wandering Jew.

L. 442 (730) Read: érly^and; cp. l. 10, n.

L. 444 (732) vanysshe: to shrink, waste away; ‘schrumpfe’ (H.). — flessh, &c.: an adverbial accusative; cf. ll. 89, and 391, nn.

L. 445 (733) shal: s. l. 477, n.

L. 446 (734) cheste: does not mean ‘coffin’, as Mr. Jephson thinks, who, consequently, is at a loss how to explain the passage, but refers to a box for holding clothes, etc. ‘The old man is ready to exchange his chest containing all his worldly gear, for a single hair-cloth, to be used as his shroud’. (Sk.) ‘Kasten’ (H.); ‘Truhe’.

L. 448 (736) heyre clout: hair-cloth; ‘härnes Zeug zum Totenkleid’ (H.); wrappe: to cover, wrap in; the insertion of in in a number of MSS. and in the Edd. of Tw., Wr., B., and M. is superfluous, as the final -e is to be sounded here; s. C. T., E 583 (Clerke’s T.) & F 636 (Squire’s T.), where this verb occurs without in in ryme.

L. 450 (738) welked: withered; ‘welk’ (H.).

L. 451 (739) to yow: of you, on your part. I find no parallel to this curious use of this preposition.

L. 452 (740) vileynye: discourtesy, rudeness; l. 610 it means ‘bad language, abuse’; ‘Schmährede’.

L. 453 (741) But: unless. — trespasse: s. l. 128, n.; ‘sich vergehen’ (H.).

L. 455 (743) Agayns: in presence of, before; cf. C. T., B 3702 (Monk’s T.). — The Latin quotation written in the margin of E., Hen., Dd., Ch.; Bo.²; Ash.²; Ad.²; Tc.²; Pe., Del., Har.², Lich., Ph.³ (Se. has: honorate senem) is from Leviticus XIX, 32 (cp. Sk.). Luther has, ‘Vor einem grauen Haupt sollst Du aufstehen und die Alten ehren’.

L. 456 (744) reed: advice, counsel; Germ. Rat; the verb s. l. 505.

L. 459 (747) yif: I have introduced this form of the conjunction, though E. and most MSS. have if, in order that the weak -e of age may be sounded here. Of the Edd., only Sk. has yif. — abyde: to endure, live.

L. 460 (748) god be with yow: good bye; still in Shakspeare; e. g. Macbeth III, 1, 44. — where: contracted from whether; cf. ten Brink, § 263, and Macbeth, I, 3, 111. — ye go or ride: a general phrase for locomotion (Sk., who refers to Kn. T., A 1351).

L. 461 (749) moot: so the spelling of E. and a great number of MSS. must be corrected; s. l. 21, n. — thider as: thither where; as used as a local particle is also found in ll. 178 and 513; cf. note to l. 598. — I haue to go, i. e., for some errand or business; cf. the Italian analogue: 'egli sen andò per i fatti suoi'.

L. 463 (751) this: s. note l. 250. — hasardour: s. l. 330.

L. 464 (752) parten: to depart, to get off.

L. 465 (753): cf. l. 439. — þilke: s. l. 76.

L. 466 (754): alle oure freendes: cf. l. 384, 'an old felawe of youres'.

L. 467 (755) Haue . . my trouthe: take my word; 'bei meiner Treue' (H.); cf. l. 414. The same phrase occurs C. T., F 759 & 998 (Squire's T.). — as: an asseveration = so, as sure (-ly) as. — espye: spy (why does Sk. alter here the reading of E., etc. into aspye, like Har.⁴, etc., and the Edd. who have derived their texts from this MS.?).

L. 468 (756) it aby: pay for it; s. l. 215, n. Sometimes also the form abeggen occurs in Chaucer; s. A 3938 (Reeve's T.), and cf. ten Brink, § 161.

L. 470 (758) assent: agreement, conspiracy; 'Complot' (H.); cf. l. 513.

L. 472 (760) he: the old man. — yow is more correct than ye, the reading of E. and some other MSS., though the latter is not quite impossible, as the two constructions of it is me (dat.) leef (cf. l. 327, above) and I haue leef are sometimes confounded with each other, e. g. I am nought leef, A 3510 (Miller's T.). Cf. Einkenkel, l. c. 111 sq.

L. 474 (762) lafte: the usual form of the pret. of leue(n); cf. the Brink, § 50 and § 165. — fej: faith, O. F. foi, fei; occurs as frequently as feith 236. — The Italian analogue deviates here somewhat from Chaucer; the hermit. says 'venite meco et mostrerollau'; and then leads them himself to 'vna grandissima grotta', etc.

L. 476 (764) no thyng: s. l. 116, n.

L. 477 (765) shal: I have not thought it necessary to introduce here, deviating from E. and other MSS., the correct form shul, as Sk. does (Tw., Wr., B., & M.: schuln), because it is not possible to state whether this was the only one used by our poet. At any rate, shul never appears in rymes, whilst shal, though only in the singular, is frequently found in such (s. the Ryme-Indexes of the Ch.-Soc., and Kittredge, l. c., p. 324 sq.); cp. also note to l. 95; and s. ll. 130, 330, 445, 510, 530, 533, 537, 624, 667. in which last passages nearly all MSS. have shul[n].

L. 478 (766) bought ageyn, etc.: s. note, l. 213. — mankynde: mankind, race of men; cf. l. 612.

L. 480 (768) Riotoures: s. note to l. 373 and l. 428.

L. 481 (769) he, which is only found in E. and a few other MSS., seems at first sight doubtful, referring to the same person or persons that in the same line are designated with they, which word is found in both places in most MSS. as well as Edd. (except Sk. & Glo. Ed.). But he can be justified by assuming that the poet in the first instance points to each of the 'riotoures' individually, and that 'they' refers to them after they all had arrived at their goal. — Cp. also note to l. 58.

L. 482 (770) floryns: these coins were so named, because they were originally made at Florence. Sk. thinks that their mention is quite in keeping with the Italian character of the poem, but as florins were also in use in different other countries, this allusion seems too vague to me. — On their value s. a long note in Speght's Animaduersions, ed. Furnivall, p. 45 sq.; it was between 2 s. 10 $\frac{1}{2}$ d and 3 s. 4 $\frac{1}{2}$ d in Chaucer's time. Sk. is mistaken when he says it was 6 s. 8 d. — rounde hints at the fact that the rims of these coins were uncut, it being an unlawful practice in early times to diminish the value of coins by cutting them for the benefit of their passing owners; cf. l. 642.

L. 483 (771) an: on the indefinite article before cardinals s. Einkenel, p. 15. — VIII: read eighte; as most MSS. have seuen (so Wr., B., M.) for it, it may be doubtful which reading is the right one, for the mistake can only have occurred by the misreading of the figures, either VIII for VII, or vice versâ. As the direct source from which Chaucer may have derived these details is unknown, there is no outward evidence to decide this question. But considering that 'seven' is a number frequently used in popular tales, etc., it is more likely that some scribe or scribes introduced it instead of 'eight' by an oversight, than that one should have substituted the latter for the former. (Observe, too, an before seuen in two MSS.). At all events, there was no necessity to alter the reading of E. — hem thoughte: s. l. 187, n.

L. 484 (772): another line (cp. l. 311 above) where we, perhaps, are obliged to admit hiatus between thánnë and áfter (s. ten Brink, § 270, and cp. Kittredge, l. c., § 126). The older form thanen might however be substituted, if we could show that Chaucer made use of it in other instances. Or the order of the words might be altered, thus; 'No lenger after deeth they thanne soughte.' But neither suggestion being sufficiently authorised, I have preferred to leave the verse as it stands.

L. 486 (774) for that: because; still used by Shakspeare; s. Henry VI¹, V, 5, 13.

L. 488 (776) worst: evidently the same fellow who was called before (l. 428) 'the proudeste' . . . — The 'zongest', as Har.⁴, Tc.¹, and Wr., B., & M. read here, is scarcely admissible, as it is he who is afterwards sent to the town (s. l. 516). If it had been the same that had made the proposal to draw lots, etc., this would certainly have been mentioned. — he: cp. l. 412, n.

L. 489 (777) kepe: s. l. 64; it may be pronounced here as a dissyllable; but, also keep is possible, in which case the verse must be accented as a nine-syllable one (s. l. 75, n.). On the other hand, also the dissyllable heede used in several MSS. might be inserted here for kepe; or of, generally used after this expression (s. B. of D. 6, C 90, etc.) may be added before what. Cp., however, l. 72, where of is also wanting in E. and most codices.

L. 490 (778) I bourde and pleye: I jest and sport, amuse myself; 'pfege ich auch sonst zu scherzen' (H.). — pleye(n) = to jest, to joke, s. ll. 539 & 670.

A. 491 (779) For the ryme's sake, we ought perhaps to write yiuen; but as this way of spelling is only found in a few MSS., the alteration did not seem advisable.

L. 492 (780) Ioliftee: jollity, merriment, pleasure.

L. 493 (781) lightly as it comth: Sk. quotes here the old proverb 'Lightly come, lightly go'.

L. 494 (782) precious dignitee: glory: 'Herrlichkeit'; cf. l. 413. — wende: preterite subjunctive of wene(n) = would have supposed, thought; cf. l. 61.

L. 495 (783) so fair a grace: so great a favour.

L. 498 (786): the reading of Har.^t, adopted by Wr., B., and M., is quite impossible, as it contradicts l. 491.

L. 501 (789) stronge: hardy, bold; 'arg, frech'.

L. 502 (790) doon vs honge = make people hang us, cause us to be hanged; cp. l. 24, n. — Sk. observes that the punishment of theft was very severe in England till 1829. Cf. the German proverb 'Die kleinen Diebe hängt man, die grossen lässt man laufen'.

L. 503 (791) moste: cf. ll. 21 & 39, notes; — nyghte: cf. l. 64, n.

L. 505 (793) I rede: I advise, counsel; cf. ll. 220, 454 (to read), & 456 (subst.). — Cut . . . Be drawe: to draw lots; cf. Gen. Prol. l. 835 sq., 'Now draweth cut . . . He which that hath the shortest shal bigynne'. Cf. the German phrase 'Den kürzeren ziehen', i. e. to be the loser. — Here the 'cut' means the lot; cf. Sk.'s note.

L. 507 (795) with herte blithe: joyfully, gladly; 'Mit frohem Herzen' (H.)

L. 508 (796) to þe towne: the article, though omitted here by E. and most other MSS., is required by grammar and metre; cf. l. 549. — swithe: adv., quickly.

L. 509 (797) breed and wyn: the Italian 'novella' has also 'del pane e del vino'; cf. Sk.

L. 510 (798) shul: cf. l. 477. — subtilly: adv., craftily, slyly.

L. 513 (801) assent: s. l. 470; 'einmütig, gemeinsam'. — where as: wherever, where that; cf. notes to ll. 178, 461, and 598.

L. 514 (802) That oon: cf. note to l. 378. — fest: fist; a Kentish form; cf. Skeat VI, XXIII sq.

L. 515 (803) hem: the correct reading; for one of the 'riotoures' asks his two comrades to draw lots. — It is curious that Sk. should have adopted here the faulty reading of E. and a few other MSS., which have hym instead. wolde (pron. wold') seems to be required here, being dependent of a preterite, though E. and many other MSS., mostly, however, of the B-Type, have wol (wil) for it. Of the Edd., only Tw. reads wolde. Cp. ll. 589/90.

L. 516 (804) fil: pret. of falle(n); another form is fel both secured by rymes, e. g. A 1103 (Kn.'s T.) and G 1282 (Can.'s Yeom.'s T.).

L. 518 (806) agon: another emendation of E. required, I think, by the metre; for else we should be obliged to allow hiatus between soone and as (cf. notes to ll. 311 and 484, and s. l. 522, where agon is, among other MSS., also found in E.). Tw., Wr., B., & M., have agon in both places. — Sk. observes that Chaucer follows in this passage (as far as l. 606) the general sense of the Italian story rather closely, but with certain amplifications.

L. 519 (807) of hem, though wanting in E., must of course be supplied for the sake of the metre; so we find it in all Edd.

L. 520 (808) sworne: the final -e, though omitted in E. and most MSS., must be added and sounded here for the same reason as above. — Cf. ll. 409—10.

L. 522 (810) woost: s. l. 24, n.

L. 523 (811) and that, &c.: a favourite phrase in Chaucer for introducing a parenthetical clause; s. ll. 577 & 593, and cf. Mätzner II, 2, 342.

L. 524 (812) departen: to divide.

L. 525 (813) nathelees: s. l. 15. — shape: to contrive, to arrange; pret. shoop, s. l. 586.

L. 526 (814) were: observe here the subjunctive in a consecutive clause; cp. Koch II, § 56; Mätzner, II, 1, 128 sq. — hadde in the next l. is also the subjunctive.

L. 527 (815) a freendes torn: now 'a friendly turn' is more usual; 'Freundschaftstück' (H.).

L. 528 (816) Pron. óoth'r answèrd; s. ten Brink, § 272. — noot = ne woot (do not know); cf. l. 24, n.

L. 529 (817) wel: the reading of the B-Type groups, which I have introduced here, as the isolated reading of E. (how) looks suspicious and more like a scribe's make-up for a missing syllable which seems to have been omitted by the common source of the A-Type. Cf. l. 536. All Edd. have wel, only Glo. Ed. keeps the reading of E.

L. 530 (818) shal or shul(n)? s. l. 477, n.

L. 531 (819) conseil: a secret: cf. l. 273. — Mr. Jephson quotes a verse from 'A lytel Geste of Robin Hode' ed. in Ritson's collection, where the same phrase occurs; Sk. refers to P. Plowman, B. V. 168, and to the modern phrase 'to keep one's counsel'. — shrewe: s. note to l. 208.

L. 532 (820) Sk. inserts the after tellen, but omits a, so following the reading of Har.⁴, &c, the majority of MSS., and all other Edd. But I do not see any necessity for deviating here from E.; s. l. 56, where the same expression occurs.

L. 533 (821) brynge: the final -n of E., etc. must be deleted here on account of the metre (only Glo. Ed. keeps it); cf. l. 114, n.; or, if bryngen be the right reading, wel must be left out, as a certain group of MSS. do. — to brynge aboute: cf. the Germ. phrase 'zustande bringen'; 'ausrichten' (H.).

L. 534 (822) graunte: s. l. 39. — out of doute: without doubt (cp. l. 97, n.), doubtless, certainly; a common phrase in Chaucer; the same sense has it is no drede, s. l. 219.

L. 535 (823) wol: so all Edd., except Glo.; shal in E. and another, but worthless MS., though not incorrect, can scarcely have been in the original. — bicreye(n): to betray.

L. 537 (825) shul(n): cf. l. 477, n.

L. 538 (826) thou right anon Aryse: this reading, only found in Cax.², where it may have been taken from the MS. used to correct the first edition (s. ch. VI, no. 31), and in Tw.'s Ed. That it is the correct one, will be seen from a comparison with ll. 381 and 542, where the same construction occurs. Aryse is, of course, the subjunctive; cf. Koch, l. c. II, § 60.

L. 540 (828) ryue: to pierce.

L. 541 (829) strogelest: to struggle, to wrestle; 'ringen' (H.).

L. 542 (830) the same: s. l. 540.

L. 547 (835) acorded: agreed; 'übereingekommen' (H.).

L. 549 837) to: vnto in E. and a few other MSS., I think, is wrong here, and only introduced to supply the final -e of wente no longer pronounced by the scribes. Of the Edd. only Glo. has vnto.

L. 550 (838) rolleth: revolves. Sk. refers to C. T., D 2217, where the same, and Troil. V, 1313, where a similar phrase is used. 'Dem Jüngsten . . . Schwebt vor der Seele auf und ab. ' (H.).

L. 552 (840) if so were: about the omission of 'it' in such like clauses, s. Mätzner II, 1, 30 sq. — Cp. also l. 311, n.

L. 554 (842) Read: lyv'th vndèr the trône.

L. 556 (844) atte: s. l. 320, n. — feend: originally synonymous with enemy, generally has in Chaucer the present signification of 'fiend, devil', but also the former one occurs occasionally; so Leg. G. Wom., l. 1996. — Sk. calls the reader's attention to the similarity of this passage with the Italian story, which says, 'Il Demonio . . . mise in cuore a costui', &c.

L. 559 (847) ffor why: because. — lyuyng: manner of life (Sk., Gl.).

L. 560 (848) leue: leave, permission (note the reading of Mm.: powere); s. Frere's Tale (D 1483 sqq.), where the 'feend' gives the following explanation for his doings:

*“. . . somtyme we been Goddes instrumentz
And meenes to doon his comandementz,
Whan that hym list, &c.*

And somtyme, at oure prayere, han we leue Oonly the body and nut the soule greve”, &c.

Cf. Einökel, l. c., 240. -- hem in E. and a few other MSS. is, of course, only a clerical error for hym. — to sorwe brynge: to bring (him) to grief (sorrow).

L. 564 (852) a pothecarie: that the spelling of this word in E. and other texts is thus to be corrected is clearly shown by l. 571; cp. ten Brink § 265. The same sort of aphæresis is still frequent in Shakspeare, e. g. Merch. of V. II, 2 'gree', etc. — Sk. observes that there is no trace in the Italian story of the graphic description in this passage (to l. 590).

L. 566 (854) quelle: to kill; s. also G., 705 (Can.'s Yeom.'s Prol.); in Mod. Engl., this word has only the meaning of 'to subdue, to reduce, to crush', etc. The original signification survives still in the word 'manqueller'.

L. 567 (855) polcat: now 'polecat': Germ. 'Iltis'. — hawe: farm-yard; older form haze, cf. Germ. 'Haag, Gehäge.'

L. 569 (857) fayn: adv. gladly; wolde f.: would be glad. — wreke: to wreak, to revenge.

L. 570 (858) destroyed: must have here the meaning of 'damaged, worried'.

L. 571 (859) and: indeed, certainly, etc.; on the use of this conjunction in the beginning of a clause answering to a question or some remark of another speaker, s. Mätzner II, 2, 341, who does not find many instances of this use in Early English.

L. 572 (860) also, etc.: as (I hope) God may save my soul (Sk.); cf. l. 16, n. — Chaucer used all three forms of this word also, als, as; the second. it seems, especially in the modern sense of 'also' = besides, too. S. the rymes C. T., A 4317 (Reeve's T.) and F 1598 (Franklin's T.).

L. 573 (861) is: though a great number of MSS. and all Edd. substitute here nīs (n'is), I have not thought it necessary to alter the above reading of E. and other texts, as the use of ne before the verb in a clause where another negation occurs, cannot be proved to have been regularly observed by Chaucer or by any other author of his period. Cf. Mätzner II, 2, 127; Koch II, § 583.

L. 574 (862) eten and dronken in E. and several other MSS. must lose their final -n because of the metre; cf. l. 114, n. Of all the Edd., only Glo. has preserved it. — confiture: composition, mixture.

L. 575 (863) Noght: s. l. 254, and cf. l. 578 nat. — moun-tance: amount, quantity.

L. 576 (864) forlete: to leave, abandon, lose; cf. Germ. 'verlassen.'

L. 577 (865) sterve: s. ll. 163 and 600. — and that: s. l. note to l. 523. — in lasse while: in a shorter time; lasse s. also l. 651.

L. 578 (866) goon a-paas: walk at a foot pace (cf. Tw., note to l. 827, and Sk.'s note to the present verse); 'im Schritt' (H.). — nat but (s. ll. 254 and 575): no more than only.

L. 580 (868) ghent: s. notes to ll. 422 and 208.

L. 581 (869) sith: adv. afterwards, then; cf. l. 102, n. — Tw. has 'swithe', probably taken from his 'Ask. 2' (s. Introduction, p. IX), as, besides, it is only found in No., a MS. which seems to have been unknown to him. Wr., B., & M., of course, have sins, the reading of Har.⁴

L. 583 (871) Tw., Wr., B., and Sk. insert of before hym without any authority, I suppose to supply a syllable missing in the verse; but it is only necessary to read botélles as a trissyllabic word (cp. Freudenberger, p. 31), as it is spelt, indeed, in several MSS., which form is also found in M., and in Glo. Ed.; hym, then, stands for 'for himself'. — thre: s. l. 280, n.

L. 584 (872) the two: on the curious use of the definite article before a numeral, s. Einkenkel, l. c. 16, who thinks this an imitation of that peculiarity in Old French. — The Pe.-group, instead of this verse, inserts here l. 590; apparently the scribe of the common original got confused by seeing l. 583 and l. 589 ending in the same words.

L. 585 (873) owene, which E. inserts before drynke, must be elided because of the metre; for the final -e of keptē as well as of clene must be sounded.

L. 586 (874) shoop hym: prepared or disposed himself; intended; cf. l. 525. — swynke: to work.; cf. l. 231, n.

L. 587 (875) In cariynge of the gold: on the substantive character of the gerund, even when not accompanied by a qualification, s. Einenkel 269.

L. 588 (876) sory grace: s. l. 429.

L. 589 (877) Hadde is altered into Hath by Tw., Wr., B., and M., without any support of MSS., most likely on account of the present tense repaireth in the next line. But considering that the historical present is sometimes connected with the preterite or pluperfect in the older language (s. Mätzner II, 1, 70), an alteration is unnecessary here; or, if considered indispensable, we might write repaired in l. 590, which is really found in several MSS. — Cp. l. 515, n.

L. 591 (879) to sermone: to discourse, to speak.

L. 592 (880) E. wrongly inserts so before as, which would give the verse a syllable too much. — cast: to plan.

L. 595 (883) make vs merie: now always used without the reflexive pronoun (cp. also l. 42, n.)

L. 596 (884) berie: s. l. 117, n.

L. 597 (885) happed: the fuller form s. l. 318. — par cas or per cas: by chance. The same phrase occurs Leg. G. W., l. 1967. — Cp. Einenkel, p. 131.

L. 598 (886) the botel: more correctly (s. l. 584) it ought to be oon of the botels. or a botel, as in fact some MSS. read. But as these are not very reliable, we must leave the above reading alone. — ther: where, wherein, in which, etc.; the use of this word to introduce a relative clause was frequent in Early English (s. Mätzner II, 2, 105; Koch II, § 511), but was going out of use in the 14th & 15th. centuries, which is shown here by the various readings, q. v. Also Chaucer sometimes adds another particle, so as; cf. ll. 178, 461, & 513.

L. 599 (887) yaf . . . drynke: on the use of the infinitive without the preposition to after yiue(n) and similar verbs, s. Einenkel, p. 236 sq.

L. 600 (888) bothe two: often used emphatically in Chaucer, e. g. A 1716 (Kn. T.), 3184 (Knight-Miller Link), etc.; cf. Koch, II, § 271. — Sk. refers to the Italian story, which has here the same words: 'amendue caddero morti'. — storuen: s. l. 163.

L. 601 (889) sq. Auycen: Avicenna or Ibn-Sina, an Arabian philosopher and physician (born A. D. 980, died A. D. 1037), who enjoyed a great popularity in the middle ages. Chaucer mentions him also in the Gen. Prologue, l. 432. His chief work was a treatise on medicine known as the 'Canon' (s. next line), the single sections of which were called 'fens', originally an Arabic word. Sk., in his note, observes that the poet seems to have taken 'canon' here in its usual sense of rule.

L. 603 (891) Mo: s. l. 390. — wonder signes: wondrous or strange signs; Sk. (s. Gl. Ind.) designates this word as an adjective, when linked with a substantive, or as an adverb, when linked with an adjective or other adverb; but, in my opinion, it always remains a substantive, only used in such cases to form a compound expression destined to give an emphasis to the second word connected with it. Such compositions are: wonder thing (frequently used), wonder storie (A 2073), wonder chaunce (B 1045), wonder dreem (B 4268), wonder dede (G 308), etc.; or joined with adjectives or adverbs: wonder lowde (B. D. 344), wonder large (ib. 895), wonder discretly (P. F. 241), etc. Note that such compositions are quite usual in German; in MHG. we find wunderfât, wundertier, wunderwerc; wundergrôz, wunderhübesch, etc., which are partly used still. Even in such impersonal phrases as it is wonder (Hous of Fame, 2), wonder was to se (C. T., B. 1882), etc., this word does not lose its character as a substantive, though the (indefinite) article is wanting; cf. similar phrases, as it is rewthe, it is pite, etc. (Einenkel, p. 13). — empoysonyng: verb. subst., poisoning; s. l. 606 empoysoner: poisoner.

L. 605 (893) homycides: s. l. 356, n.

L. 607 (895) cursednesse: s. l. 112. — This line is rather puzzling, which is shown by the various readings in the MSS. and Edd. The worst seems to be that of Har.⁴ and its relatives, which has been adopted by Wr., B., M., and Sk.; at least their ful of for of alle is quite meaningless. Tw. has cursednesse f. cursed synne, like In. and Ad.¹; he is followed by Hertzberg in his translation, who says, 'O aller Frevelthaten Frevelthat!' This seems to me the real meaning of the phrase, but then the second 'cursednesse' ought to be in the plural; cf. King off alle kingess, etc. in Orm, 344 (s. Mätzner II, 2, 299 sq.). On the other hand, this reading rests on too thin a basis to be admitted into the text. So I have thought it best to leave the reading of E. and a great number of MSS. untouched, the more so as cursed synne is pretty well synonymous with 'cursednesse'. The sense then, appears to be 'most cursed (or wicked) sin (or deed) of all!' — The word 'Auctor' found in the margin of E. and Ash.² means that this passage is the reflection by the author (s. Sk.).

L. 608 (896). There is also a great difference in the readings of this line. Tw. has the same wording as E., but omits the comma after traytours. Wr., B., and M., following again Har.⁴, etc., have traytorous homicidy, which is metrically impossible. Glo. adopts traytorous, but keeps homycide, etc. Also the reading homycides in some MSS. deserves some attention. But taking homycide as an adjective = 'murderous', as Sk. seems to do, no alteration of the text of E. is necessary.

L. 609 (897) Read: luxury^and; cf. l. 10, n. The same Sk.

L. 610 (898) blasphemour: blasphemer: 'Lästerer' (H.). — vileynye: s. l. 452, n.

L. 611 (899) vsage: custom; 'Angewöhnung' (H.). — pride: insolence; cp. l. 428, n.

L. 612 (900) mankynde: the final e must be sounded; cp. l. 478. — bityde: to happen; s. l. 646.

L. 613 (901) wroghte: pret. of werken = made; the present form of the preterite of 'to work' in -ed is much later.

L. 614 (902) boghte: s. l. 213, n.

L. 616 (904) goode men: cp. l. 64, note. — Here begins the Pardoner again to address his audience in his usual style (cf. Sk.).

L. 617 (905) ware: beware; 'bewahre.'

L. 618 (906) warice: to heal, to cure; also spelt warisshe, but not secured by a ryme. Cf. ten Brink, § 112.

L. 619 (907). So þat: if only etc.; s. l. 88, n. — nobles: a 'noble' had the value of 6 s. 8d; it was first coined by Edward III. (cp. Sk., who refers to P. Plowman, B. III 45). — sterlynges: Francis Thynne says in his 'Animaduersions' (ed. Furnivall., p. 45): 'sterlinge money tooke their name of Esterlinges, whiche refyned and coyned the siluer in the tyme of kinge Henry the seconde'. — 'Nobel oder Groschen' (H.).

L. 620 (908). The Edd. have no comma between siluer and broches, but a | is found here in Dd., Ch., In., Ad.¹, a full stop in Phy., Hod., Pe., Sl.², Ro.¹; E. and Hen. have no sign between these two words. but a | between the following ones, Ash.¹ only one between spones and broches; the other MSS. have no punctuation whatever in this line. This observation does not, of course, prove much in itself, but at any rate it shows that a certain number of scribes took these words in the same sense as I have done, viz. that siluer broches is not to be understood as a compound word or as an adjective joined to a substantive, for the Pardoner would have certainly accepted brooches and rings, etc. made of another valuable metal. He intends saying, as I take it, 'Offer me coins made of silver, or silver in any other shape, also brooches, etc.' But should we follow the reading of those MSS. which place spoones before broches, the two words siluer and spoones would more naturally be considered as forming a compound noun, as these objects were mostly made of silver. But enough of a subject which, perhaps, is not of much consequence. Sk. refers to a similar passage in P. Plowman, B. prol. 75.

L. 621 (909) bulle: s. l. 54 and Introduction, p. XXVIII.

L. 622 (910) Com: Sk. and all other Edd. have Cometh according to a certain number of MSS. But this alteration (Wr., B., & M., as usual, again follow Har.⁴) is quite unnecessary, as Chaucer frequently uses this shortened form of the Imperative; s. ll. 174, 473, 489, 637 etc., and cf. ten Brink, § 189. — wulle: cf. l. 160; on the use of the partitive genitive s. Einkenkel, 100 sqq.

L. 623 (911) names: I have kept this plural according to E. and other MSS., though most of them have name, which, of all Edd., only Sk. adopts. For that this modern plural was already used by Chaucer, is shown by Einkenkel, l. c, 42. It is, however, to be pronounced as a monosyllable here.

L. 624 (912) shul: s. note to l. 477.

L. 625 (913) assoille: s. ll. 99 & 645. — heigh: I have not restored the final -e required by the definite form of the adjective, as E. and a great many MSS. have dropped it, and it is mute here; s. ten Brink, § 236, and cp. ll. 345, 352, & 499. In the ryme, we find only hye; cf. Cromie's Ryme-Index (-ye).

L. 628 (916) leche: physician (the same word as the Mod. Engl. 'leech').

L. 632 (920) male: bag (Fr. malle; cf. 'mail-bag').

L. 634 (922) popes: cf. l. 54, and Introduction, ch. V.

L. 637 (925) Com forth: Step forward; s. note to l. 622.

L. 639 (927) wende: to go; the modern went is the pret. of this verb. The same form l. 494 is of a different derivation.

L. 640 (928) Miles: The Har.⁴-group and its relatives have townes instead, and it is only natural that Wr., B., and M. follow this reading; but I do not understand why Tw. and Sk. have introduced it into their texts, based on quite another authority. The Pardoner, in my opinion, wishes to say that his hearers are to renew their offerings as frequently as possible, which is much more forcibly expressed by the reading of E., etc. than by the other one. Besides 'townes ende' (s. D. 1285, Friar's Prol.) seems to have been a common phrase for 'place' (everywhere), which a scribe would be much more likely to substitute for the poet's peculiar expression than the reverse. So townes is evidently one of the numerous mistakes introduced by the original of the B-Type. Cf. Introduct., p. LXX.

L. 641 (929). So pat: s. l. 88, n.

L. 642 (930) (goode and) trewe: true, of full value; this refers to the unlawful practice mentioned above (note to l. 482).

L. 643 (931). This verse is too long; either It's is to be pronounced as one syllable (s. ten Brink, p. 154), or ƿew'rich is to be slurred (ib. p. 150). I should prefer the former alternative.

L. 644 (932). Another awkward line; at first I felt inclined to omit mowe (may), though nearly all MSS. — except No. and Ra.² — have it, as it seems superfluous. But perhaps the syncope of i in suffisaunt gives a better solution of this difficulty (cp. ten Brink §§ 263 & 288; Kittredge § 138), the more so as the accentuation suffisaunt, which would else become necessary, is still more doubtful.

L. 645 (933) Tassoille: cf. notes to ll. 99 and 325. — in contree: on the omission of the article in such adverbial expressions s. Einkenkel, l. c., p. 9 sq.

L. 646 (934) auentures: adventures, accidents. — bityde: s. l. 612.

L. 647 (935) Paraenture: peradventure, perhaps; pronounce Paraunter, as the word is sometimes spelt in the MSS.; s. various readings, and cp. Book of the Duch. 788, Trol. I, 619, etc. Cf. ten Brink, § 263.

L. 648 (936) his: this singular referring to a plural (oon or two) is sometimes found in Early Engl. and even in Shakspeare; cf. Mätzner, II, 1, 141 sqq.

L. 649 (937) which a seuertee: what a security, surety.

L. 650 (938) fclaweshipe: company.

L. 651 (939) moore and lasse: the greater and the smaller (people), i. e. all; cf. 'Gross und Klein' (H.). — The ryme (passe) shows here that the spelling with a is correct. But also lesse is secured by rymes; e. g. C. T., B 959 (Man of Law's T.) and C 275 (Doctor's T.); lasse and moore E 67 (Clerk's T.).

L. 653 (941) heere, though only found in a few MSS. besides E., seems to be sufficiently established. Still, as hooste sometimes occurs as a dissyllable (s. note to l. 1; C. T., A 3115 and 3501 [Miller's T.], and E 1 [Clerk's Prol.]), heere may be a later addition to make up for the final e of hooste, become mute.

L. 654 (942) enuoluped: enveloped, wrapt up; 'von Sünd' umfangen' (H.).

L. 657 (945) Ye: s. l. 404. — groote: s. l. 88, note. — vnbokele: unbuckle, undo; this shows that purses in Chaucer's time were not such things as we now call so; on the contrary, they must have been a sort of pouches fastened to the girdle and secured by straps and buckles, probably similar to the 'gipser' (A 357) of the Frankeleyn as drawn in the picture of the Ellesmere MS.

L. 658 (946) Nay: s. l. 154, n.

L. 659 (947) Lat be: let me alone; Germ. 'lass sein!' (cp. l. 371, n). — theech: for so thee ich (s. the reading of Hen. and Lin.), i. e. 'as I may thrive, as I hope to prosper'. On the verb thee s. note to l. 21; besides, observe the pronunciation of the final -ch of ich, which, as a rule, was dropped by Chaucer, in this old formula.

L. 661 (949) were: cf. l. 281, n.

L. 662 (950) fundement: seat, buttocks; 'Steiss' (H.). — depeint: part. p. of depeinte(n) (cf. ten Brink, § 182), depicted, stained; 'abkonterfeit' (H.).

L. 663 (951) seint Eleyne: Mr. Jephson gives the following explanation: 'Saint Helen, the mother of Constantine, took a great interest in verifying the situations of the various places in Palestine, which are mentioned in the Scriptures as the scenes of our Lord's life and passion . . . Three crosses having been discovered under the foundations [of the temple of Venus which the Emperor Adrian is said to have erected on Golgotha], she at once concluded that they were those upon which our Lord and the two thieves had suffered. In order to discover which was that of our Lord, the dead body of a youth, which happened to be passing on its way to the grave, was applied first to one, but without effect, then to another, with the same result; but when it touched the third, the young man was restored to life; and the cross by means of which the miracle had been performed was venerated as the true cross, etc.' 'This incident is commemorated in the calendar prefixed to the Book of Common Prayer on the 3^d of May, under the name of the 'Invention',; cp. 'Kreuz-Erfindung', in the German calendar. — Tw. gives a quotation from Maundeville to the same effect. Cp. also Sk.'s note. The whole legend is likewise told by Cynewulf in 'Elene'; ed. by Zupitza.

L. 664 (952) coillons: testicles; 'Berlock' (H.).

L. 665 (953) stide: stead; also spelt stede; as neither form appears in ryme, we must admit both. — scintuarie: sanctuary, a consecrated object; 'Heil'ge Schragen' (H.).

L. 666 (954). I wol thee helpe hem carie: the various readings differing greatly here, it is difficult to say which is the correct one; apparently, however, the word helpe was omitted in the common source of the A-Type, and the different scribes tried to supply it, each in his own way, or corrected the passage according to another MS. Metrically the best form is the one adopted in the text; the same is found in Tw., Sk., and Glo.

L. 667 (955) shryned: enshrined. — toord: piece of dung; 'Schweinedreck' (H.); cf. B 2120.

L. 669 (957) wrooth: wrath, angry.

L. 670 (958) pleye: s. l. 490.

L. 372 (960) the worthy knyght: s. Gen. Prol., l. 42: 'A knyght ther was and that a worthy man.'

L. 673 (961) lough: s. l. 188 (note).

L. 674 (962) right: quite (Sk.); Germ. 'gerade'.

L. 675 (963) be..myrie of cheere: myry of chêere (s. l. 10, n.); be of good cheer (cheere = face, countenance); 'habet frohen Mut' (H.).

L. 676 (964) kisse: 'In the early and the middle ages kissing was the common form of salutation, and the 'Osculum pacis' was a sign of reconciliation and charity' (B.).

L. 677 (965) preye: the correct form, though only preserved in a few MSS.; the same next l.; cp. l. 16, n.

L. 680 (968) ryden: not the present, with long ī, but the plural of the preterite(ŷ); s. ten Brink, § 153.

After the conclusion of this Tale, there follows in most MSS. the Shipman's Tale; exceptions are made by No. (Topas, Pardoner, Canon's Yeoman), Pe., Mm., Ph.³ (Topas), Ra.³, Gl. (Manciple), Se., Tc.² (Franklin's Prologue), Tc.¹ (Nun's Priest), Hat. (Clerk of Oxenford), Phy. (Merchant), To. (Man of Lawe), Har.³ (Prioress.); Har.⁵ ends with the 'Pardoner'. No particulars are known to me about the continuations in Ph.¹, Hel., Bo.¹, Del., and Chn.

Additions.

1. My sincerest thanks are due to Dr. F. J. Furnivall, who has kindly taken the trouble of reading the proof-sheets of my 'Introduction' and 'Notes', and whose useful suggestions I have mostly followed.

2. s. p. VII. I have forgotten to mention that Prof. Sweet has reproduced part of the Pardoner's Tale in his 'Second Middle English Primer', Oxford 1886, p. 98 sqq., comprising ll. 175—188 and 373—606 of the present edition. I shortly note the following deviations from my text: — ll. 178 & 546 dys; l. 187 that om.; l. 375 for add. before to; l. 387 clepen; l. 412 which f. he; l. 416 yborne; l. 435 nor f. ne; l. 476 nat; l. 492 jolitee; l. 499 high; l. 504 wisly; l. 508 town; l. 518 gon; l. 532 tellen thee in wordes; l. 535 shal; l. 538 and f. thou; l. 539 Arys; l. 549 unto; l. 559 60 hem f. hym; l. 583 of hym . . botels.

3. s. p. XXVII. Another analogue of the Pardoner's Tale was lately discovered by Prof. Kittredge and published in 'Modern Language Notes', XV, p. 387, from which it has been reprinted as an Appendix to the Chaucer-Society's edition of the Tale from the Hodson MS. 39 (s. p. XXXVIII). — This analogue is found in Coryat's Crudities, 1611, pp. 189—91, who locates the story at Venice. But here the dramatis personæ are four brothers who arrive, with a ship laden with riches. Two of them go on shore, and plan the murder of the other two by means of poison, &c. — Four thieves are also named in some of the versions communicated by Mr.

Clouston (l. c., p. 430 & 435), but there seems to be no other relation to the present one.

4. s. p. XXVII. Recent researches make other sources of the Parson's Tale probable; s. Prof. Liddell's article in 'An English Miscellany, Presented to Dr. Furnivall', Oxford 1901, and Kate Oelzner Petersen's essay 'The Sources of the Parson's Tale', Radcliffe College Monographs, no. 12, Boston 1901, who discusses as such, Raymund of Pennaforte's 'Summa Casuum Poenitentiae' and Guil. Peraldus' 'Summa seu Tractatus de Viciis'.

5. s. p. XXXIX (8) and p. XXXXIV (19). The source from which Se. took its better readings, agreeing with the E-Dd-group, seems to be a MS. nearly related to No., perhaps the original of this latter one, but not No. itself (s. readings ll. 334, 601, 603, 604): Besides several coincidences in which these two MSS. are joined by a number of others, the following ones admit of no other explanation than a direct influence: — ll. 136, 164, 211, 240, 245, 246, 338, 352, 368, 387, 402, 403, 406, 419, 470, 480, 524, 525, 569, 571, 578, 583, 608, 653, 658, 675.

6. s. p. 128, l. 315. Dr. Furnivall kindly calls my attention to a short article by C. J. Webb in the Classical Review XI, p. 283, col. 2, who says that the early MSS. of John of Salisbury's Polycraticus at Soissons and Montpelier (which have sidenotes giving the sources of his anecdotes and statements) attribute the story of Stilbon-Chilon finding the nobles at play, and his consequent disgust and return home, to a theretofore unknown Latin author, Catulus or Catullus Parmensis. —

7. s. p. 155, l. 640. Dr. Furnivall thinks that miles ende is far oftener used than townes ende.
